WE HAVEN'T WRITTEN to you for nearly a year, but please excuse our seeming neglect, for we have been ever so busy. Since our last letter in June, 1939, we have chosen a theme, taken car loads of pictures, written pages upon pages of copy, and, incidentally, torn up at least half of it.

You know, each year we try to keep the theme of the annual a secret, and it's ever a Herculean task! Nevertheless, in spite of blond spies, talkative reporters, and inquisitive friends, we think we have managed to guard our precious secret fairly well. Now, however, a glimpse into our crystal ball shows that the cat must be let out of the bag, so—the theme of this annual is SCIENCE! You see, our world today is a scientific one, so we have tried to show you that Science affects every one of us in every thing we do—that living is a Science in itself. To accomplish this, we have modeled the 1940 Shingle after a scientific textbook, but we hereby warn all Science teachers that any resemblance to the orthodox textbooks is merely accidental.

This brings us to the real purpose of this letter—the introduction of our good friend, Master Molecule. He is the sprightly little fellow of whom you will hear so much in this book, since his sense of humor and scientific knowledge have been of great help to us; but now our work is finished, and we find that we must part with our friend. We recommend Master Molecule to you as a capable guide who will conduct you safely through the following jungle of words and pictures. Before school is out, we hope that we will hear favorably from you.

INTRODUCTION

THE GREATEST PROGRESS in civilization during the last five decades has been made in science. Science has raised the standard of living of the masses and at the same time has put into the hands of man implements of destruction that can destroy the finest civilization. Education should bring to the individual a sense of responsibility of using our scientific discoveries for the uplifting of mankind. Our scientific discoveries of the past have brought new opportunities to boys and girls who are leaving school this year. The next five decades may bring even greater discoveries and open greater opportunities for the student of today. It is very fitting that this edition of the Shingle be dedicated to science.

NO ONE PERSON ever accomplished any large job single-handed, and this holds especially true with this year's annual, for its production has been the result of much hard work by the staff, its advisers, the printer, and many other helpful people.

First of all on my "thank you list" come Ballard students, since every one of you has helped us in some way or another, either by posing for pictures, writing reports, or just owning a Shingle.

Then, too, there always seems to be a power behind the throne. I had three in the personages of our advisers. Miss Benham supervised the senior and junior editors in their first semester work, earning their appreciation and friendship, Mr. Nobles directed the art editors, and Mr. Hazzard, the third member of our triumvirate, was here, there, and everywhere. Also, I'd like to thank those members of the faculty who gave their time to help us.

Mr. McCaffrey, our patient and long-suffering printer, was invaluable, while Mr. Dunn, his artist, taught us a great deal.

Last, and by no means least, there is the staff, consisting of seven boys, four girls, and yours truly. Our work was sprinkled with laughable moments. Sig Johnson and Warren Kalbach, Shingle photographers for three years, were always having escapades with our precious cameras. Our typist, Alford Nord, really had a terrible time, for everyone's work had to go through his typewriter. Unluckiest woman of all was Shirley Trimble, proofreader, for she had to be a combination of a mind-reader and a memory expert. Marilyn Lonon and Geraldine Kempa, Mary and Gerry respectively, did a grand job of the senior section, as did Jean Hassall and Keith Anderson, junior editors, aided by Pinckney Rohrback, their assistant. Willard Swanberg and Floyd Jacobsen, the art editors, were subject to much razzing from the staff, but they kept right on working, as did Ernest Lund, sports editor.

To conclude my rather lengthy wanderings in a scientific way—Q. E. D.—"Thank you" and "good luck" to everyone.

Your Editor,

MARY ANN PARISH

SIX YEARS AGO Ballard High School received its first All-American honor rating for an outstanding yearbook. Since then each consecutive staff has also earned this award, bringing the total to six such ratings awarded by the National Scholastic Press Association.

Honoring these editors and their staffs, this page is dedicated in appreciation of their superior work. Their record is unequalled by any other Seattle high school. Only fifteen All-American ratings were awarded throughout the United States last year.

CHAPTER ONE

Fundamental Particles

How do you do, Ballard-ites. My purpose in being here is to streamline Science, to apply it to you and your school, and to enjoy myself while doing it. You know, according to an orthodox Science textbook, "Fundamental Particles" are basic elements which combine readily with other substances, but not for me. That's why I called this chapter on Administration "Fundamental Particles." The forces behind the school are certainly basic elements and the very fact that teachers and students get along harmoniously proves that these forces blend readily.

Microscopic Meanderings

TO REALLY get the "lowdown" on a microbe's latest fancy the scientist employs his microscope, but we molecules like to be different. For instance, these "microscopic meanderings" of mine are really just a review and preview of Ballard's academic life.

"Meandering" exactly fits these Ballard teachers, for I have never seen so many changes, and yet approximately the same number of teachers remains. In the fall the girls' gymnasium added Miss Louise Ingalls to its staff, and Miss Coulter returned from China. At the same time Miss Miles left Ballard for the Junior Placement Bureau. Midyear found Miss Miles back within the fold and Mr. Munson gone. Mr. Bendele then transferred to boys' gymnasium work with Mr. Koenig assisting him. Miss Neffeler was transferred to Roosevelt and Mrs. Kortman came to Ballard from West Seattle. In early spring Miss Coulter and Miss Millenbach left their positions, Miss Millenbach being replaced by Miss Leonard and Miss Leonard by Miss Marguerite Gardiner.

This year brought a new trend in the entire school curriculum with the addition of several new practical-living subjects. Miss Mann introduced a new course on "Straight Thinking;" Miss Blanchard, a class on the interpretation of motion pictures; Mr. Huseby, a "Remedial Reading" class; and Mr. Rowlee, a spring class in "Consumer Economics."

Principal George L. DeVilbiss in conference with vice-principal H. E. Dickerman dictates details of pending changes.

Miss Ruth Millenbach, head clerk, prepares the daily bulletin, while assistant clerk Miss Ina Leonard checks attendance figures.

Enrollment increased slightly in the spring, bringing the total to 1,955 students, but this was still slightly short of last year's mark, thirty-one students short, to be exact.

In February the office inaugurated a new honor system of attendance checking. Under the new rules each student writes his own excuse on the pink slips. Parents are notified of a student's absence by telephone or letter as always and may write the excuse if they make a request to do so. Despite the scoffing of some die-hards who said that skipping would increase by leaps and bounds, Ballard High School had the highest attendance record for March in the entire city. Ballard's honor has been tested, and the only skipping Ballard students do is done with a rope.

Ballard's long hoped for improvements were begun this year with the removal of portable nine and the grading of the athletic field. The tennis courts were painted, and the girls' hockey field was improved. Added surprise was the brand new backstop for the feminine baseball fans. Whether or not Ballard's improved athletic prowess was a direct outcome of all this sprucing up, our microscope does not reveal, but both the football and basketball teams made the best showing in years.

These five also help direct the school: "Daddy" Coulter, custodian; Mr. Ira Pease and Miss Madelyn Ryder, study hall supervisors; Miss Ann Chamberlin, girls' adviser; and Mr. J. E. McComb, boys' adviser.

Positive Posts

LIKE SIGNPOSTS pointing the way, the words of the counselors hasten the stumbling steps of Ballardites along the vocational highway. No signpost was ever set up without a reasonable amount of checking. Therefore, in order to discover the needs of Ballard students, members of the guidance staff combine their information, questionnaires are sent out to all the teachers, and suggestions are sought from physician, nurse, and attendance department. Such research results in advisory periods for the entire student body, case conferences for the individual, and general vocational guidance for every student.

The true value of the advice of the counselors probably is not realized by the average student until he leaves Ballard. The newly enrolled college student finds his adjustment to university life made far easier due to the forethought of these teachers, the job-seeker realizes the necessity of being well grounded in the subjects that he was advised to take long ago, and every student finds greater happiness in a vocation for which he is not only suited, but also really enjoys. No matter how useless "all this fuss about vocations" may have seemed to the average student while he was in school, he soon discovers its value when he graduates.

Besides those teachers pictured on this page the counseling staff includes, ex officio, Mr. DeVilbiss, Mr. Dickerman, Miss Chamberlin, and Mr. McComb, who meet weekly with the others to consider various matters.

ENGLISH

Science is practical, ever aiming toward one goal and discarding all that is unusable. Thus, the English department brought school and school work closer to outside activities than ever before by applying outside problems of the average student to work of the classroom. This trend, first begun last year, rose to greater prominence in every class as emphasis was placed on the practicality of each daily assignment. Student and faculty interest both increased as the subject was "brought home," for pupils began to appreciate the necessity of certain courses, and teachers gloried in the renewed interest. Vocational material and the choice of vocations, ever-important matters, were emphasized by Miss Nicholson; Mr. Huseby conducted a practical English class, which stressed training in parliamentary law and outside opportunities for speaking; Miss Blanchard conducted a class in motion picture appreciation; Miss Mann introduced a short course in straight thinking; and Miss G. Wilson used home problems as a basis for her composition assignments, as well as studying vocations and Washington industries; while Mr. Forsyth's new classes undertook reference work on great printers and publishers for a Talisman feature story series. In the manner of true scientists, Ballardites are now learning to apply themselves and their work to their daily life, for the scientist is practical on all occasions.

ART Science is an art but Art is also a Science. Living up to its scientific background, this year's art curriculum covered a wide field of artistic possibilities, leaving no ability undiscovered in order to increase the pupil's knowledge. Scenery and posters for many school productions were created under Mr. Noble's direction, while real life sketches and craft work interested Miss F. Wilson's classes. Sample results from the skilled fingers of many budding artists were placed on display in the third floor showcase for all Ballard to view.

MUSIC Music also has its scientific angle, as those who have trouble with harmony well know. Enterprising students in Mr. Smith's classes formed a clarinet trio, a trumpet trio, and a string trio, all of which were favorably received at several Ballard gatherings; as were the many vocal groups directed by Miss Charlton. Especially fortunate was the Boys' Double Quartet who traveled to Los Angeles with Miss Charlton to sing at a national music conference. To all accounts they must have done very well.

LANGUAGE The Fine Arts department found that the Science of letter writing was interrupted by Europe's difficulties, for the usual correspondence with foreign countries was rather unsuccessful. "Business went on as usual," however, as Ballardites learned French, German, Norwegian, and Latin. New textbooks added interest to some classes, while the Norwegian group presented several plays for local organizations. One way to find out how little English one knows is to study a foreign language.

HISTORY

Science has its own history, a record of great importance, for its achievements are truly "history in the making," but Ballard's history department covers an even greater and much wider field. World history, United States history, general economics, consumer economics, and Pacific Rim classes combine to form a well-rounded curriculum for Ballard students.

Practical application is being developed in the consumer economics class, a new subject introduced this February. The fundamentals of economics have been reduced to a minimum of essential facts so that more time may be devoted to authentic consumer problems. Points developed in such a class as this are useful to every citizen, since he is a consumer in one form or another, and the world is rapidly becoming consumer-conscious.

Careful records of the latest national and international happenings are being kept by Miss Burnett's classes. Volumes VI and VII of "History of Our Own Time" have been completed, as well as a scrapbook on the Munich conference. The present European war news is also being recorded in a scrapbook, while the envelope clipping file contains the latest maps and pictures. These records will probably prove invaluable in a few years. Further progress in student application was shown by the development of panel discussion groups and student-made tests. Imagine, students are testing themselves! Surprising fact is that the tests generally are harder than the ones written by the teacher.

MATHEMATICS

It is plain to even the unexperienced that Science and mathematics are closely connected, for the scientist applies his mathematical training and ability at every turn. Then, too, neatness and accuracy are prime requisites for success in either field. Mathematical subjects this year included Algebra I, II, and III, Geometry I, II, and III, trigonometry, and navigation, a class which especially attracted boys interested in marine service, since such a subject may well be applied on the bounding billows.

SCIENCE

Here at last we have the "scientificest" Sciences of them all—the subjects of the Science department. Hardy Ballard students are taught physics, chemistry, radio, health education, botany, and biology, surrounded by test tubes, experimental apparatus, skeletons, plants, and animals. Biology pupils chose semester projects involving personal investigation on some subject of interest to them; radio students brought new fame to Ballard by setting up a transmitting station W7EA; the central office took moving pictures of pupils cultivating the garden and gathering their crops.

LIBRARY

The true scientist gathers his material from every available source, and Ballard students are no exception to this rule, for from eight o'clock in the morning until four or five o'clock at night Ballardites may be found enjoying some of the fourteen hundred fiction books on the library shelves, searching for an elusive statistical reference, or preparing assignments from the forty-eight magazines to which the library subscribes. Other students fill many and varied jobs in the library.

Many books have been written on the Science of health, but this is one place where practical application is more essential than "book larning." Girls' gymnasium work was divided this year so that freshmen and sophomores were separated into respective classes, enabling the new girls to become better adjusted and keeping the advanced players by themselves. Of special interest is the fact that more girls are taking physical education this semester than any other. Boys' gym work now includes badminton classes, an activity for which the boys have long been asking.

INGALLS

COMMERCIAL Perhaps the most practical of all the subjects taught are found in the commercial department, for a commercial student graduates from high school well enough equipped to immediately settle down to the serious job of earning his living. Many teachers have students doing secretarial work, a system which saves valuable time for the instructor and gives the pupil necessary practical training. This year's curriculum includes typing, shorthand, junior business training, office training, commercial English, penmanship and spelling, commercial law, commercial arithmetic, and retail selling. Retail selling students also received actual training by working in department stores and other businesses.

Topic of much conversation around school was the retail selling classes plan of constructive criticism. Each student in the class was criticized by all the other members. Criticisms were generally compliments, amazing as it may seem, and the others were generally constructive. It is no wonder that it is hard to find fault with this group of Ballardites, though, for the requirements for entering the class are very strict.

HOME ECONOMICS

There's a Science to cooking and the other arts of homemaking, but in order to replace "beginner's luck" with knowledge Ballard girls have enthusiastically enrolled in the various home economics classes.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Amid the roar of machinery in the industrial arts classrooms many boys create articles of beauty and durability.

This year's curriculum includes Mechanical Drawing I and II, Machine Shop I and II, machine wood working, architectural drawing, elementary drawing, cabinet making, mechanics.

Scientific Control

ONE OF THE primary functions of a democracy is the Science of leadership. Carrying out this policy, the Student Council trains youth leaders, gives youth a voice in governing its own affairs, and furthers the aims of student government in the school. Among the council's activities are the appointing and governing of nearly all student school committees, considering school problems, taking desired action, giving roll room talks, sponsoring assemblies, and considering petitions.

Halloween brought another "safe and sane" campaign. Unfortunately, Ballard did not place as high as usual in the finals, but damage was not great in this district. In an attempt to keep Ballard students off the street, the Student Council arranged a kiddie costume parade, gave talks in all the roll rooms, and sponsored a P.-T. A. dance in the field house. There was roller skating on the tennis courts also.

Even the manner of choosing council members is democratic, for each year the student body votes five boys and five girls into membership in the council. The other four members consist of the presidents of the junior and senior classes, and the presidents of the Boys' and Girls' Clubs. Thus, the entire membership of this group is based upon the choice of the students themselves.

Safety Devices

MAINSTAYS of the Student Council are the traffic, locker and clean-up committees, since they really maintain school safety regulations. The traffic committee prevents disaster by policing the halls and stairways, so that students cannot travel dangerously fast or go up a "down" stairway. Even seniors slip up here every so often. Members of the locker committee check each period to see that all lockers are locked, thus preventing the loss of valuable articles. It seems that some students save time by leaving lockers unlocked and then complain about their losing things. Lastly, the clean-up committee keeps the halls free from dangerous and unsightly debris. Running in the halls and leaving lockers open are punishable by assignment to tardy roll, but school pride is supposedly sufficient to keep the halls clean.

Prime attraction for membership in these groups is the fact that students on these committees are allowed to leave class early and enter late.

Steering Gear

Boys' Club officers Johnny Boitano, reporter; Jim Boyle, student manager; Warren Kalbach, secretary; Don Spencer, president; and Bill Busse, vice-president, discuss matters with boys' adviser Mr. McComb in senior alley.

THE SCIENCE of leadership and control is the foundation of the Boys' Club. With the high aim of promoting Ballard spirit and upholding the reputation of the school by maintaining a name for clean sportsmanship, good scholarship, and gentlemanly conduct, it is necessary to give the boys' association the power to deal with questions pertaining to the welfare and discipline of Ballard boys.

Activities sponsored by the Boys' Club are usually successful. Some of this year's accomplishments were Boys' Club day in the lunchroom, featuring twelve-inch hotdogs; the first letter-award assembly to be held at night, a grand success; and several sports banquets, enjoyed by all who attended.

Working closely with the Boys' Club are the Beaver Service Club and the Lunch Bag Brigade. Beaver Service Club members are pledged to create and maintain a loyal Ballard spirit in the school and to serve Ballard unselfishly in every way possible. The club keeps the grounds clean, paints signs on the sidewalks, puts protective fences around the lawn, and keeps order in the lunchroom. Lunch Bag Brigade members check up to see that no lunches are taken out of the building, thus preventing the presence of unsightly paper bags on the school grounds, and saving the clean-up squads much unnecessary work.

UPPER: Boys' Club committee chairmen Winton Sleipnes, Fred Nylin, Russ Holt, Bill Plouf, Rolf Johanson, Sig Johnson, Dean McClintick, Jack Westphal, and Earl Reed meet with president Don Spencer to discuss Boys' Club problems.

Inventive Activity

CREATING a friendly feeling among all the girls in the school is a Science in itself, the Science to which the Girls' Club is dedicated. To accomplish this purpose, the organization is led by twenty-four committee chairmen and five officers. Several middy drives, faculty teas, parties, and assemblies are sponsored each year, establishing a better understanding among the girls in the school. Also of great help in this respect are the Senior Counselor's meetings. Freshmen girls are divided into small groups, each headed by a senior girl whose duty it is to explain school rules and regulations, outside activities, and different awards.

In order that Ballard girls may benefit from the experiences of other high schools, the Girls' Club officers attend the All-City Conference, a semi-annual affair. At this gathering officers and advisers from the nine Seattle high schools assemble and discuss their problems and the possible solutions. In the fall this conference is usually held at Beaver Lake during a weekend, and in the spring it is a five or six hour affair at the University Temple.

A purely social affair was originated this year in the exchanging of dinners by the officers. These dinners, to which both the Girls' and Boys'

Club officers are invited, have aided the clubs in cooperating for joint activities.

The regular Girls' Club cabinet meetings are held the first and third Tuesdays of the month at eight o'clock in the girls' rest-room. After the call to order and the recitation of the Girls' Club creed, minutes are read, current activities are discussed, plans are made for parties and assemblies, and work is assigned to the various chairmen who supervise such activities. General discussions are held and improvements made.

Girls' Club committees are: Flower, fine arts, house, scrap-book, poster, lost and found, health, personality, hospitality, typing, standards, handicraft, social service, friendship, vocational, arts and decorations, make up, library, ticket, minute, installation and election, program and music, merit, and hostess.

CATALYTIC AGENTS

JUST so that there will be no misunderstanding, catalytic agents are substances that aid action. Field Patrol members are constantly on the job at school plays, baseball, basketball, and football games, and any other doings that occur after school or at night. The boys are awarded emblems and chevrons based on the number of hours they have worked. The work of the Field Patrol seldom receives an ovation, but their jobs are essential to a smoothly organized occasion.

Library clerks are on duty morning, noon and night, checking out books, magazines, pamphlets, and clippings. The various posts for the assistants include the outer library door, the study-hall door, the magazine room, the mending room, and the front desk. Members soon become skilled at their various tasks and are able to do the job in a minimum amount of time.

PARALLEL FORCES

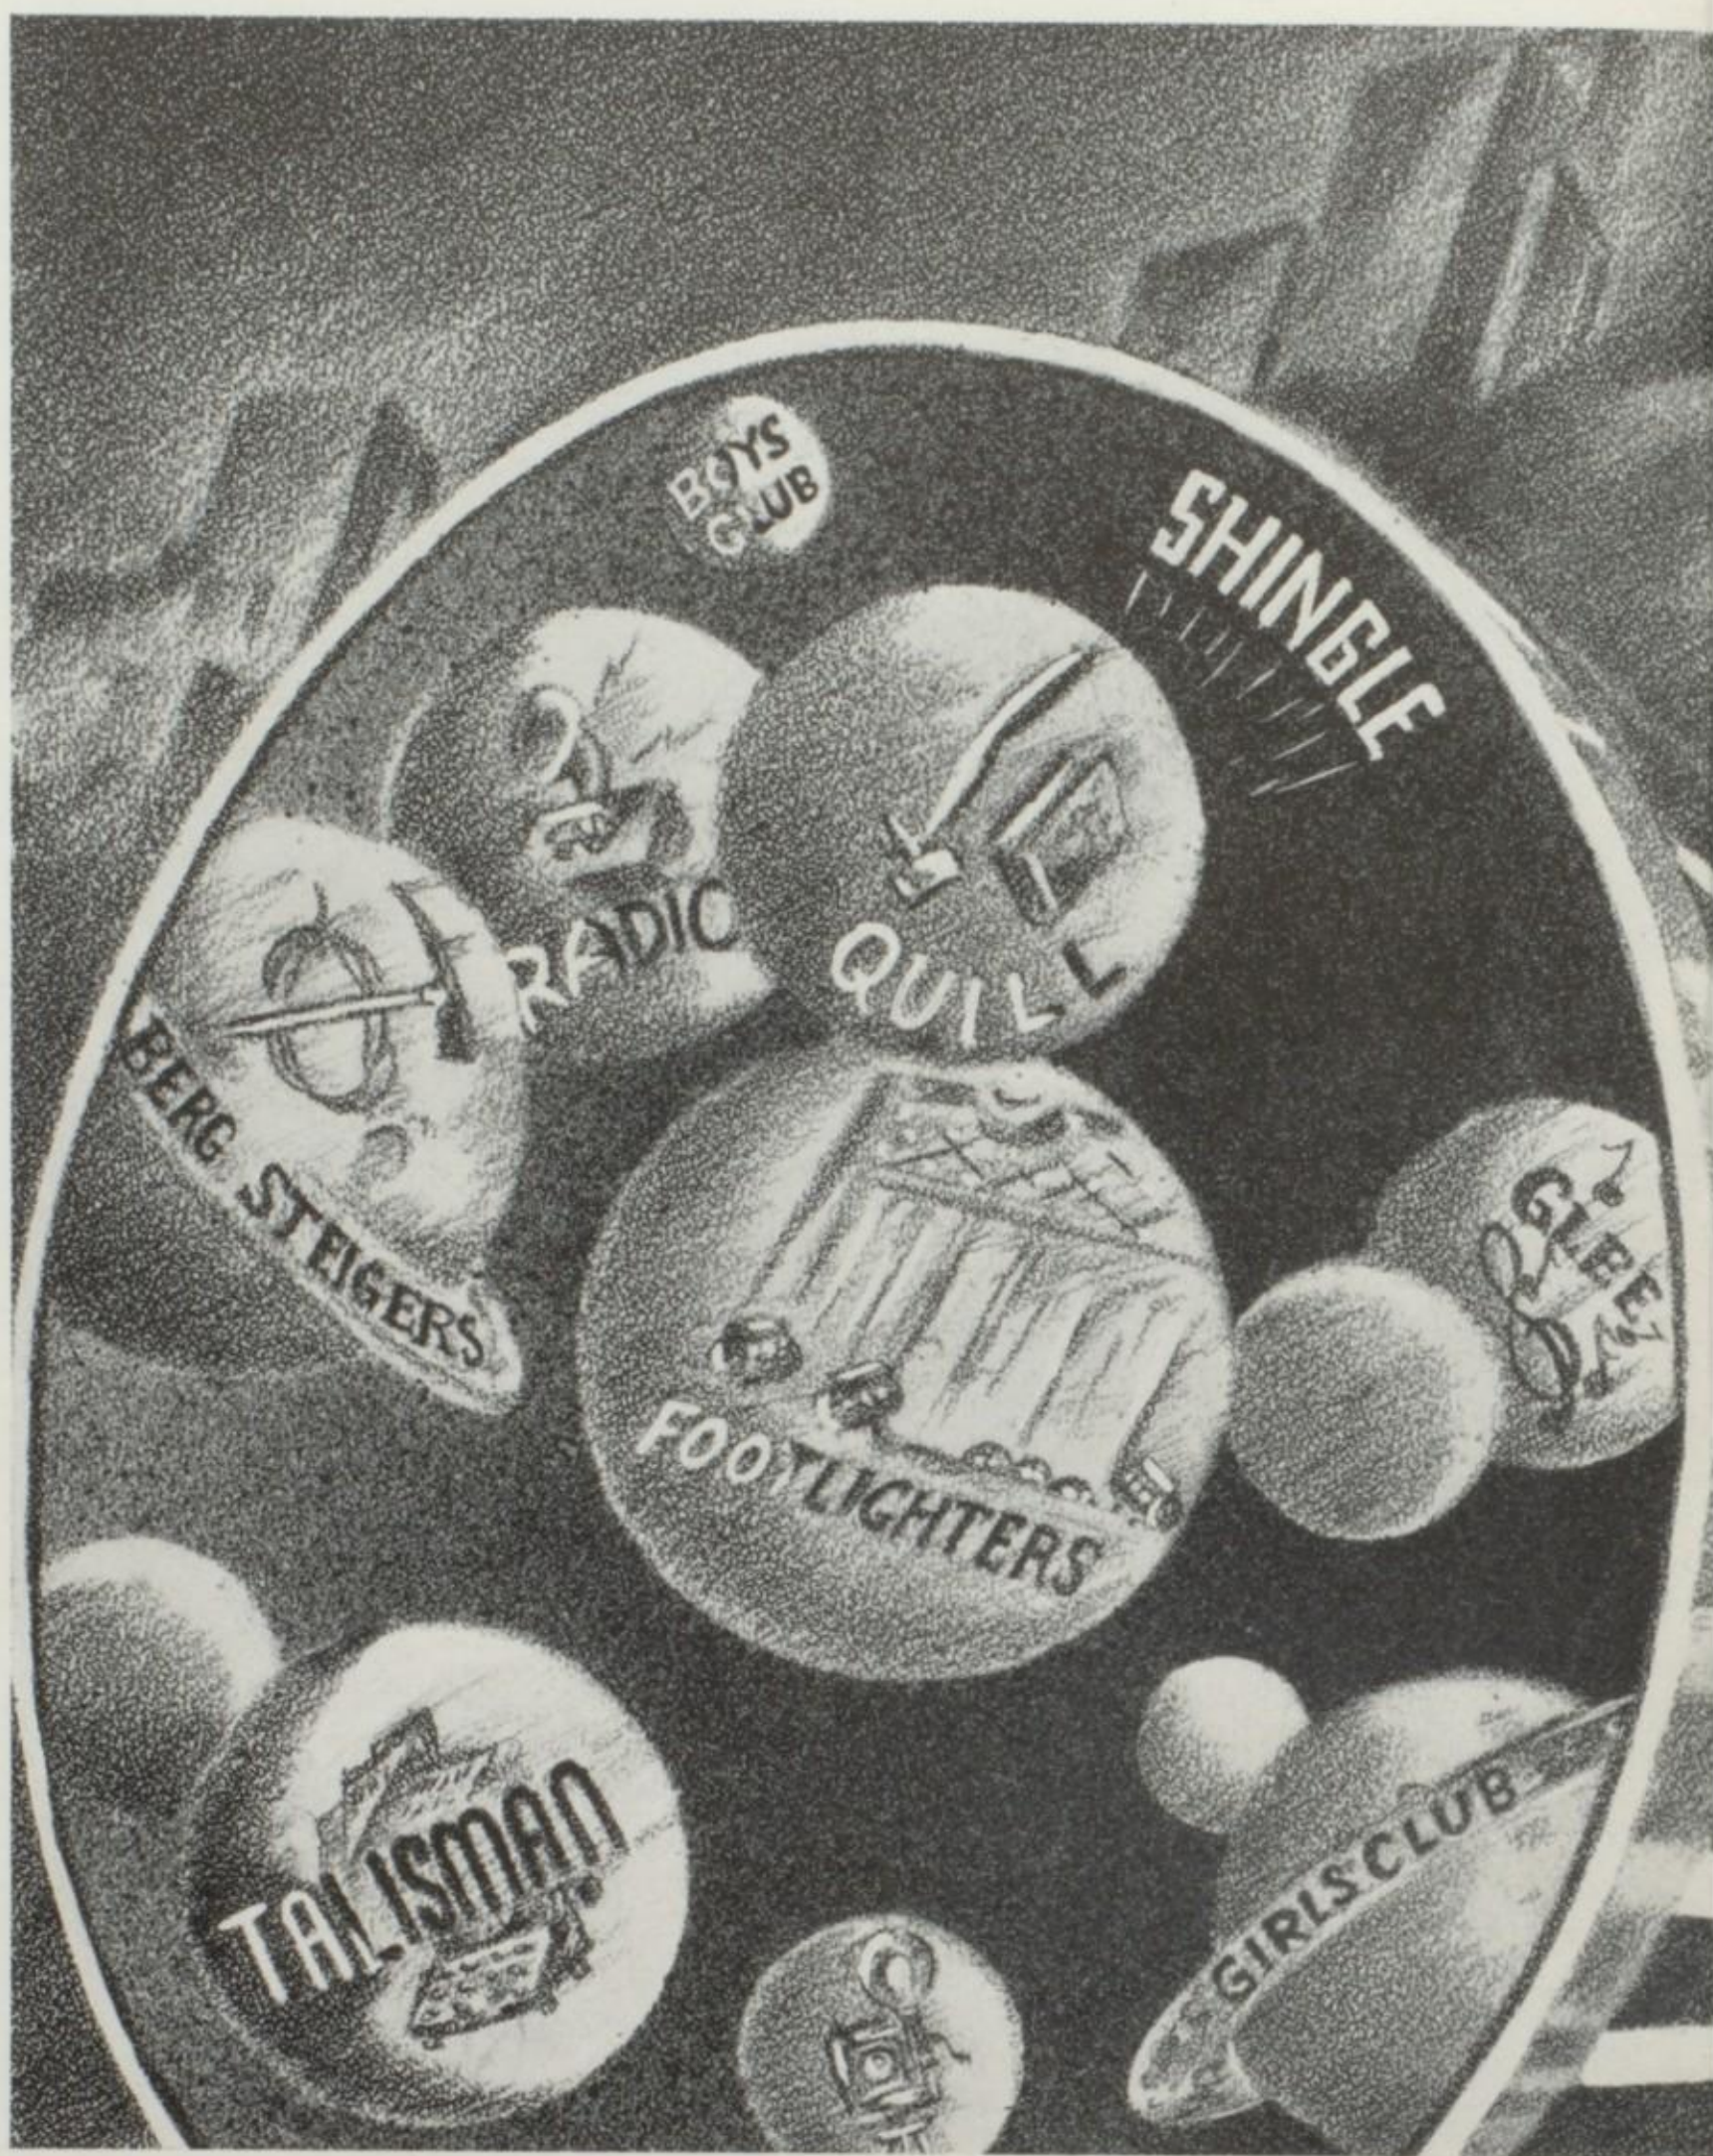

AS MR. PEASE's welcome call of "Clean up, please," marks the end of each study period in the auditorium, each section is checked by a Clean-Up Squad member to be certain that all waste paper and other rubbish has been removed from the desks and the floor. Main purpose of this procedure is to keep the study-hall clean and neat for every new group. Then, too, it does help the school staff in their daily sweeping.

Checking roll for the entire auditorium, keep records of absences, arrivals, and departures, and collecting study hall excuse slips from the various rooms occupy five or six girls each study period. Such details as these require a great deal of time. Most difficult job is checking third section since a different group of pupils sits there each period every day. Beside the enjoyment which they appear to receive from performing their duties, these clerks are given merit points on an hourly basis.

CHAPTER TWO

Active Elements

Anybody that engages in as many activities as these Ballardites do, certainly deserves the description "active." Publications, musical groups, dramatic presentations, service organizations, activity clubs—none is too difficult or too detailed for some students to carry through. Often the student body is entertained by the combined efforts of these "Active Elements," and behind all these varied "goings-on" are several faculty members whose support and suggestions are usually among the chief reasons for the success of a student achievement. Such are the "Active Elements."

F. JACOBSON

Above: Mary Ann Parish, editor, discusses a two page layout with Shingle director Warren M. Hazzard. Every effort was made to make this year's Shingle entirely different from any previous annual, not only in theme but also in content and style. The art work also received especial consideration. Below: Adviser Bess Benham talks with the senior and junior section staffs; Pinckney Rohrback, assistant junior editor; Jean Hassall, junior editor; Gerry Kempa and Marilyn Lonon, senior editors. Absentee: Keith Anderson. The girls spent all of their first semester fourth periods in room two-twelve doing Shingle work, making picture assignments and working on the senior questionnaires.

The SHINGLE

DEAR READER:

The editor has asked me to "write something to fill up this space." So here goes!

(1) My hardest job was keeping the editor on the job! So she once said. I agreed, to her dismay. Most faithful, she who willingly spent much out-of-school time on the book, was Marilyn. Warren and Sig classified, arranged, and mounted the snapshots.

(2) Biggest staff battle was over the cover. Originally it was to be all black with silver printing. Biggest mystery was our filing system; no one could ever find anything. Worst piece of luck was taking the band picture three times—and then losing the best negative. Most oft repeated words were, "It must be radically different." Biggest thrill was seeing the printer's first page-proofs.

Most banned remark, "Next year we'll —."

(3) Things I remember with pleasure: Mary Ann's good nature; Al's letter-perfect typing; Keith's on-the-job attitude; Shirley's scientific terminology research work; Ernie's loyalty; Jean's smooth-running quietness; Floyd's million-dollar smile; Willard's repartee; Gerry's efficiency; and Pinckney's earnestness.

(4) Students' most often asked question is, "What do you have to do to be All-American?" Answer is, "Work. Be original. Attain high standards." That means sacrificing good times, doing one's duty, and giving one's best to the task at hand—whatever that may be. The same principles hold true in any field demanding worthwhile accomplishment—in or out of school.

Willard and Floyd each drew four of the page borders, Willard three of the division pages, and Floyd the end sheet and a sketch for the cover design. Below: Sports editor Ernie Lund keeps both Al Nord, typist, and Shirley Trimble, proof reader, busy typing and reading copy. Scientific Review

NOT TO BE excluded from the scientific world is the field of journalism, for accuracy, punctuality, and ability are primary factors in the newspaper business also. For almost a quarter of a century the Talisman has been serving Ballard students, keeping them posted on all school activities. Both the managing of the business and the actual newswriting are done by the News I and II classes.

The Talisman tries not only to interest pupils, but also the parents. Publicity is given to any community project such as playfields or any drive sponsored by the police or fire departments.

The paper is managed by an editorial staff chosen from the News II class. For the past year this staff has included: Dwight Scheer, editor; Russ Holt and Norman Marshall, assistant editors; Maxine Knight, associate editor; Ray Farley and Ray Vellat, sports editors; Genevieve Petersen and Doris Loken, assistant sports editors; Mildred Mash, Margaret McKechnie, Wallace Miller, Lillian Manning, Eileen Pederson, Marion Koons, Toby Gaupseth, feature editors; Eva Nelson, June Kumakura, Esther Michner, and Dee Cameron, assignment clerks; Agnes Faulks and Bob Metcalf, proof clerks;

The remainder of the class made up the reporting staff. This group consisted of Andy Aarhaus, Dorothy Houck, Ernest Lund, Bill Plouf, George Velas, Frank Follman, Paul MacWilliam, Charles Pearl, Florine Reichert, Chester Storaa, Ray Tilden, and Jane Williams.

The business staff is also chosen from the News II class. The members of this staff were: Ken Strom and Norman Marshall, business managers; Lola See, Dorothy McDermott and Elsie Stanness, advertising managers; Grace Snell and Ruth Eidsness, mailing clerks; Pete Andersen, Frank Follman, Ralph Jensen and Bill Linscott, messengers; Carl Holmgren, Pat Fitzgerald, and Ken Olsen, circulation managers.

The News I class does the soliciting for the ads which finance the paper. The solicitors and collectors for this semester are: Marie Berg, Bill Blum, Dorace Caw, Jim Casura, Joyce Davenney, Laverne Engleheart, Della Frankhouser, Maxine Frankhouser, Betty Gabrielson, Ruth Hawkinson, Blaine Highfield, Syrene Jangord, Betty Jane Jensen, Chester Oddson, Donald Osborne, Elaine Peterson, Norm Reid, Iris Rugg, Helen Samson, Marjorie Shuck, Betty Somers, Paul Stocker, Ada Stark, Eline Stark, and Don West.

At the head of the two classes is Mr. Orrin Forsyth, whose duty it is to teach the pupils the elements of news-writing so that they can manage the paper themselves.

Discord and Harmony

ELIMINATING discords to bring about harmony is the Science in which Ballard musical groups are interested. Over five hundred students in the music department devote much of their time and energy to this purpose.

One of the most popular activities for vocal students is the A Capella Choir. This year's enrollment has an increase of twenty members over last year's group of fifty-two, but even so many are excluded due to lack of talent or space. The popularity of the choir includes its audience too, for their music at the Christmas assembly was enjoyed so much that it has been requested as an annual event. Other engagements of the year were programs for the Shriners, the Kiwanis Club, the High School Music Festival at the University of Washington, and the Women's Federated Clubs during National Music Week.

Glee Clubs have their following too. Both girls and boys have their own organizations, the senior glees being composed of advanced singers who have already had one year of junior glee clubs and have passed a singing test. Samples of their work were heard in the opera "The Firefly," in which music students sang and acted. Sr. Glee Clubs also perform in assemblies, concerts, and commencement exercises.

The true importance of such musical groups is revealed to the average student only at one of their performances, but behind the scenes these students must spend hours of practice at home and at school. No matter how talented the boys and girls in such organizations may be, they must be thoroughly grounded in the Science of work, for the old adage, "practice makes perfect" was never more true. Although the average listener may merely comment, "Say, that's good, isn't it?" or "I like that, it's pretty," those schooled in music appreciation find that the result of such intensive work and study is harmony, a melodious coordination of pleasing and beautiful sounds.

Vibrating Membranes

THE SALT AND PEPPER for many school events is provided by the Ballard Band, directed by T. Stewart Smith. On the rather full calendar of Ballard's popular Senior Orchestra there are four definite goals: the Opera, the All-School Play, the Spring Concert, and Commencement.

Commercial Compound

COMBINING the varied talents of all the musical groups is a yearly project. This year the usual Midwinter Concert was replaced by the opera, and a Spring Concert was given May twenty-fourth. As a commercial compound the concert had all the elements necessary for success, as it combined two senior glee clubs, four junior glee clubs, the A Cappella Choir, and two orchestras. Among the selections included on the program were "The Wind's in the South," sung by the Girls' Senior Glee, the A Cappella Choir's rendition of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus," sung by the immense mass chorus. Commercial or otherwise, the Spring Concert was a very successful and popular compound.

All wound up in his particular Science is Darwin Norby, for "tootin" on a tuba requires plenty of air, hot or otherwise, and strong lungs. The marvel is that the cameraman was able to get this close to the huge instrument and still not injure his ear drums. Still, one can become immune to anything.

Double Action

SINCE ACTION is equal to reaction, this group of boys must be pretty grand, 'cause Ballard students certainly were willing to help the Boys' Double Quartet go to California, and it wasn't just to get rid of them, no sir! These eight boys not only attended the National Music Educators' Convention in Los Angeles during their spring vacation, but they sang at many local functions also, such as the Ballard Lion's Club luncheon.

Exciting as all crowd scenes are, the conclusion of Act I of "The Firefly" excelled them all for grand confusion.

The Firefly

AN OUTSTANDING production of the year was Ballard's presentation of the well-known opera "The Firefly." Beautiful music, excellent acting, delightful costuming, and splendid scenery left a thrilling impression on every member of the audience. Three complete changes of scenery were required and several changes of costumes for every player. Prominent reason for the opera's success was the spirit of cooperation predominant among the music, dramatics, and artistic sections of the school. Sewing classes worked on costumes, stage crews and budding artists spent long hours on the scenery, musical groups directed by Miss Charlton and Mr. Smith rehearsed their selections hour after hour. Director of many past Ballard successes, beloved Miss Coulter outdid herself to make this opera, her last at Ballard, the overwhelming success the audience found it to be.

Study In Philosophy

AN AMUSING sketch of contrasting philosophies was drawn on the evenings of April 19 and 20 in the school auditorium, when "You Can't Take It With You" was presented as the All-School Play.

After smashing its way through Broadway—and hitting the top in motion pictures—Moss and Kaufman's brilliant comedy success again took a successful bow, this time on the Ballard High School stage.

After the cast had been selected began the real work of memorizing their parts. Contrary to general opinion, however, the most difficult phase of a play's production is not the memorizing of lines—but rather growing into the character to be portrayed. A good actor or actress actually becomes the person he is enacting while he is on stage. This quality of putting yourself in the state of another being is known by a newly coined word as "empathy."

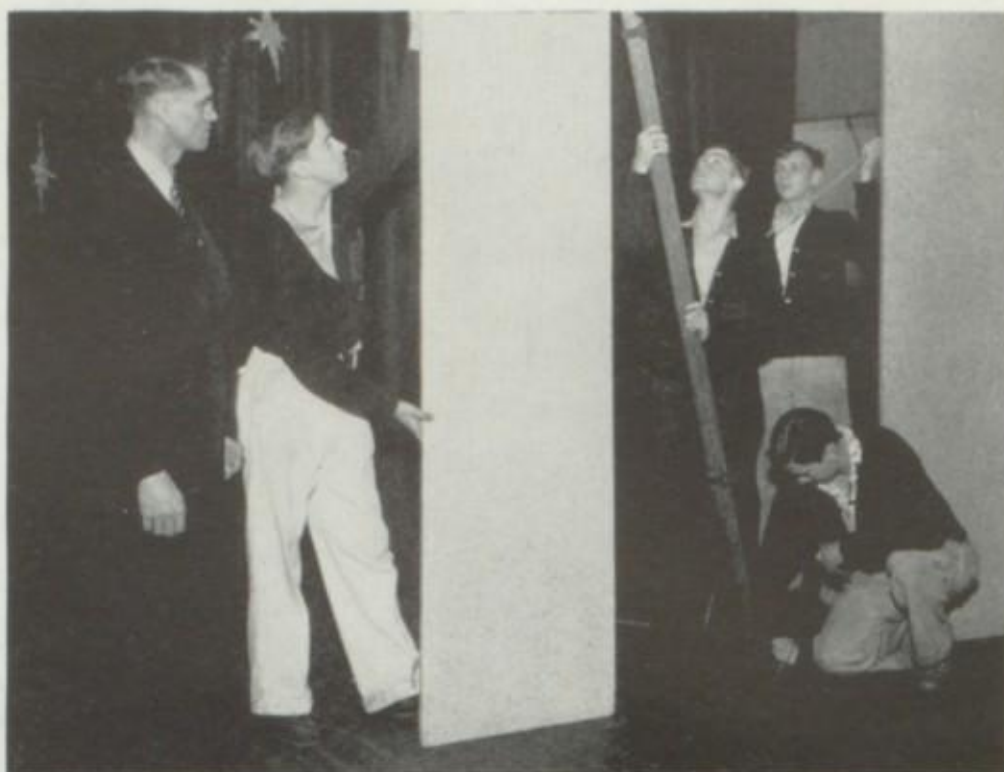

This year's play cast worked especially hard to achieve such quality of acting. And the results readily began to show in rehearsals, for soon the Russians sounded and looked more Russian; the love scenes became more real; Grandpa's philosophy improved, and everything in general took on a more promising aspect. Finally "You Can't Take It With You" was ready to be presented to an enthusiastic Ballard High School audience.

Top: Boy wins girl and the poor family and rich family finally reach an understanding and become fast friends as dinner is served and the curtain closes on "You Can't Take It With You." Seated are Glen Stanley, Katherine Stranack, Jean Barber, Elgene Siefertson, Blaine Highfield, Bud Stoll, Malcolm Anderson, Betty Briggs, and Vernon Rowe, being waited upon by Mary Pat Brady and "Ozzy" Reese. Center: Romantic music is rendered by Donald, while the two romantic leads, Alice and Tony, look fondly at each other. Grandpa just chuckles! "Ozzy" Reese, Elgene Siefertson, Wally Miller, and Ed Voss. Bottom: Artiste Jean Barber portrays Vernon Rowe as a Grecian god.

Atomic Forces

ATOMIC FORCES cannot be seen, but they are a very vital part of any action. This is just as true of Ballard's very active stage crew. Behind the scenes of even the smallest school production one finds the stage crew busily engaged in many duties. This year's accomplishments included the construction of sets for the operetta "Firefly," the designing, construction, and painting of the four sets for "Just Making Believe," and the construction of the set for the school play, "You Can't Take It With You." For all this hard work the stage crew receives emblems and chevrons.

Air Pressure

"MR. CHAIRMAN, fellow debaters, and friends—" Thus the air pressure begins its upward climb as the debate teams saturate the ether with words of all dimensions.

This year the newer problem-solving debate in which solutions are offered to the problem presented was used throughout Seattle. Since more benefit seems to be derived from this new style of debate and the old "punch" is not gone, such discussions become just as heated and exciting as the affirmative and negative type of debate.

Ballard High School has two debate squads with two coaches. The squads are divided into "A" and "B" teams, the only difference being that the "A" team has the analysis speaker whose duty it is to define the problem being discussed and the various terms used by the speakers. "A" teams meet "B" teams from other schools, and vice versa. Two final all-city debates are held at the end of the season three weeks apart.

During the fall semester the problem under discussion was "How can men be made happy in this machine-made civilization?" while in the spring the two debate squads attempted to untangle and solve the question "What is the best form of government for local units in the state of Washington?"

HIGH, WIDE, and handsome should be the motto of these lads, for they engage in nearly every school activity, as well as granting scholarships, giving parties, and raising money. Joining this group is no easy task, but once in the fun begins with a vengeance.

RESERVE ENERGY

DRESSED in white middies and light blue ties, these Girl Reserves are a pretty snappy looking bunch, a group that gets a good deal of fun out of life wherever they are. They are successful hostesses, too, for every Girl Reserve party brings forth the comment "swell!"

SOUND WAVES

BEST PLACE in the world to let off excess steam is at a Forum Club meeting, since this group gathers for the pure joy of arguing about international affairs, government problems, or any other small matter that comes along during the course of events.

SLIDING FRICTION

EXPERTS at the knack of putting the right foot forward, members of the Flying Norsemen Ski Club combine the actual joy of skiing with instructive meetings here at school. The friction created isn't always between the ground and skis either.

RADIO ACTIVITY

LARGELY responsible for Ballard's new transmitting station, W7EA, are the boys of the Radio Club, many of whom are already amateur radio operators with their own call letters. Anyone that can learn that code deserves congratulations—it was too much for yours truly.

FOOT CANDLES

PROVING ground for many stars of the future, the Footlighter's Club provides valuable acting experience and enjoyable good times for all its members. Their appearance is always an assurance that the act will be extra-specially good, no matter what the occasion may be.

P + T = A

TAKING as its theme "Today's Youth—Tomorrow's Citizens," the Parent-Teacher Association had a very successful year. The group attained several state goals which were: an increase in membership, a study of material from the national office, an observation of Founders' Day, a recreational program, an increase in magazine subscriptions, and a gift to the Student Aid fund.

During the year the P. T. A. sponsored dancing classes, monthly dances, a ski trip and horseback riding. They also sponsored the production "Just Making Believe," which achieved phenomenal success. As a result of this achievement, the organization gladdened the hearts of seniors by sponsoring a "Senior Prom" early in June.

Helping others is a large part of the P. T. A. program also. Christmas packages were sent to children who might not have otherwise received gifts, and a substantial gift of fifty dollars given to the Boys' Double Quartet toward their expenses during the trip to Los Angeles.

Nearly every month brought new activity for this group. In October a Dads' night was held; in December, a Publicity Institute and a Christmas party; in February, a Founders' Day program; in March, "Just Making Believe"; and in June, the Senior Prom.

Atom Smasher

AS THE atom smasher rose to fame by its destructive ability, so "Just Making Believe" made history by breaking a twenty-eight year attendance record for Ballard shows. A musical comedy in swingtime written and directed entirely by students, the show was presented under the sponsorship of the P. T. A. Harley Kirk, Jr., a star in many of Ballard's productions, was the author and producer, while Jack Copestick expertly headed the financial staff, and Rolf Johanson directed the building of the magnificent scenery.

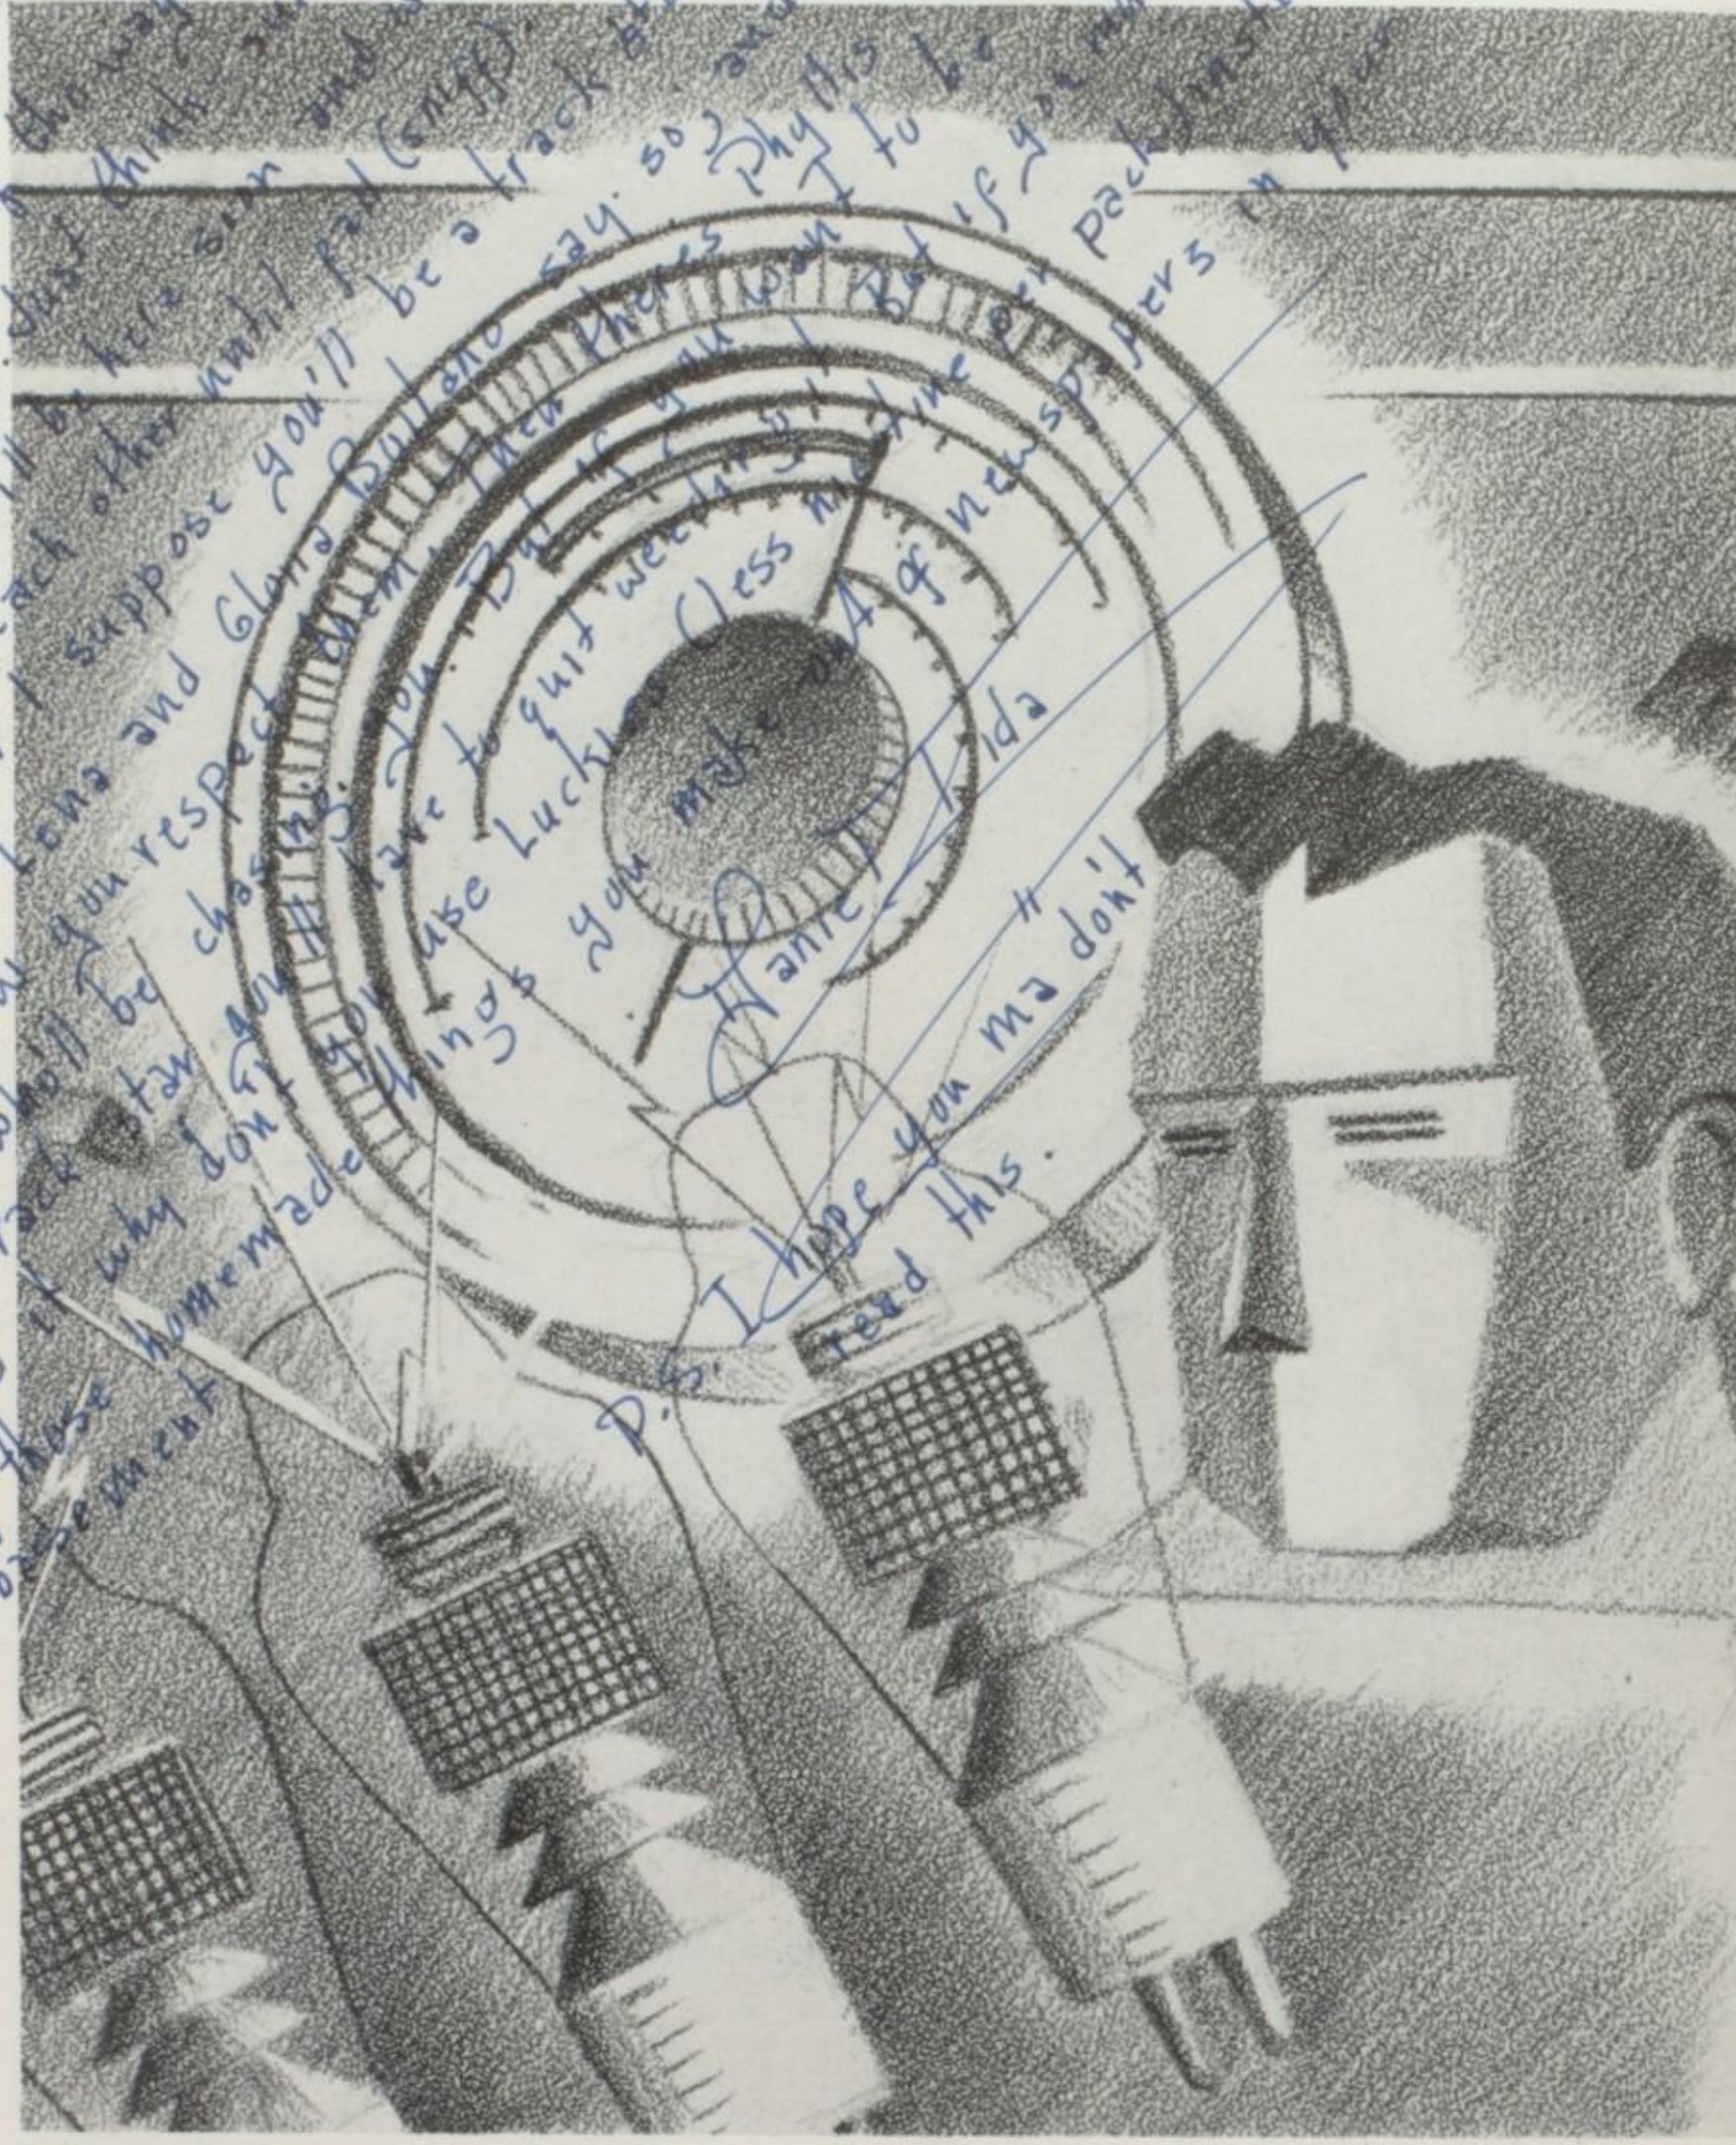

Leading parts were taken by Virginia Eggan, Bill Revercomb, Mary O'Laughlin, Blain Highfield, Merlin Tosh, Keith Miller, Bay Benson, Leonard McEacheran, Sig Johnson, Ruth Benedetti, Janet Bishop, Jack McKenna, Marion Churchill, Glenn Stanley, Ed Voss, Harold Greenwald, Noel Voss, and Marjorie Swanson.

A seventeen-piece swing band under the direction of Taylor Bowie and a thirty-voice swing choir led by Al Brevik were prominent reasons for the success of the show. The Harmonettes singing popular tunes of the day and Yvonne Meyers playing her never to be forgotten "Sugar Blues" also added much to the performance.

Above—Author-producer Harley Kirk gives final instructions to his all-star cast as the "atom smasher" prepares for action. "White tie and tails" were the order of the day in this scene. General panic keynotes this scene as "Mother" faints and the "help" are pictures of dismay. Cause of all this excitement was a mere wedding announcement. Lower—Like all true musicians, "Just Making Believe" was outstanding for its dancing and choir groups, composed of very talented students. The arrival of the press to "scoop" a coming party arouses everyone as "Father" worries and "Mother" talks too much as usual, but fortunately everything worked out all right.

CHAPTER THREE

Physical Properties

The Science of the various sports has been the brunt of many books, talks, and articles, for perhaps nowhere is the term "scientific" used more often than in the athletic field. Each sport has its own peculiar procedure, its own rules of the game, its own equipment, its own Science. Proof that Ballard has sports down to a Science is the improved athletic progress of this year's teams. The football team came out of the cellar, the basketball team was in the spotlight for top place, and the tennis, golf, track and baseball teams kept Ballard's average near the top.

Sports Review

SUCCESS MARKED the year for Ballard in the world of sports as fighting Beavers offered terrific competition to all opponents. The football team captured three wins while the hoopsters collected ten. Three of four spring athletic squads were in the midst of pennant fights as the Shingle went to press.

With an all-letterman backfield, the Beaver pigskin team played hard, but lack of weight proved a handicap. "Jelly" Anderson was chosen all-city end.

Coach Bendele, gym instructor and head coach of football, basketball, and track, has produced increasingly strong teams since coming to Ballard in 1938.

Carl Anderson was voted inspiration of the team and Jim Boyle, honorary captain.

Ballard's basketball team lived up to high ratings by taking second place. Voted the second best casaba player in the prep league, "Jelly" Anderson received his second all-city award. "Swede" Svendsen was presented the inspirational award.

Spring proved sweet to Salmon Bay as the Beaver baseball squad was undefeated, the golf team was in second place, the track team was undefeated, and the tennis squad was playing the best tennis in years when this book met the ink.

Coaches Koenig, Nardin, McEachern, and Taylor turn out fighting Ballard squads for competition in baseball, intramural, tennis, and golf.

Football

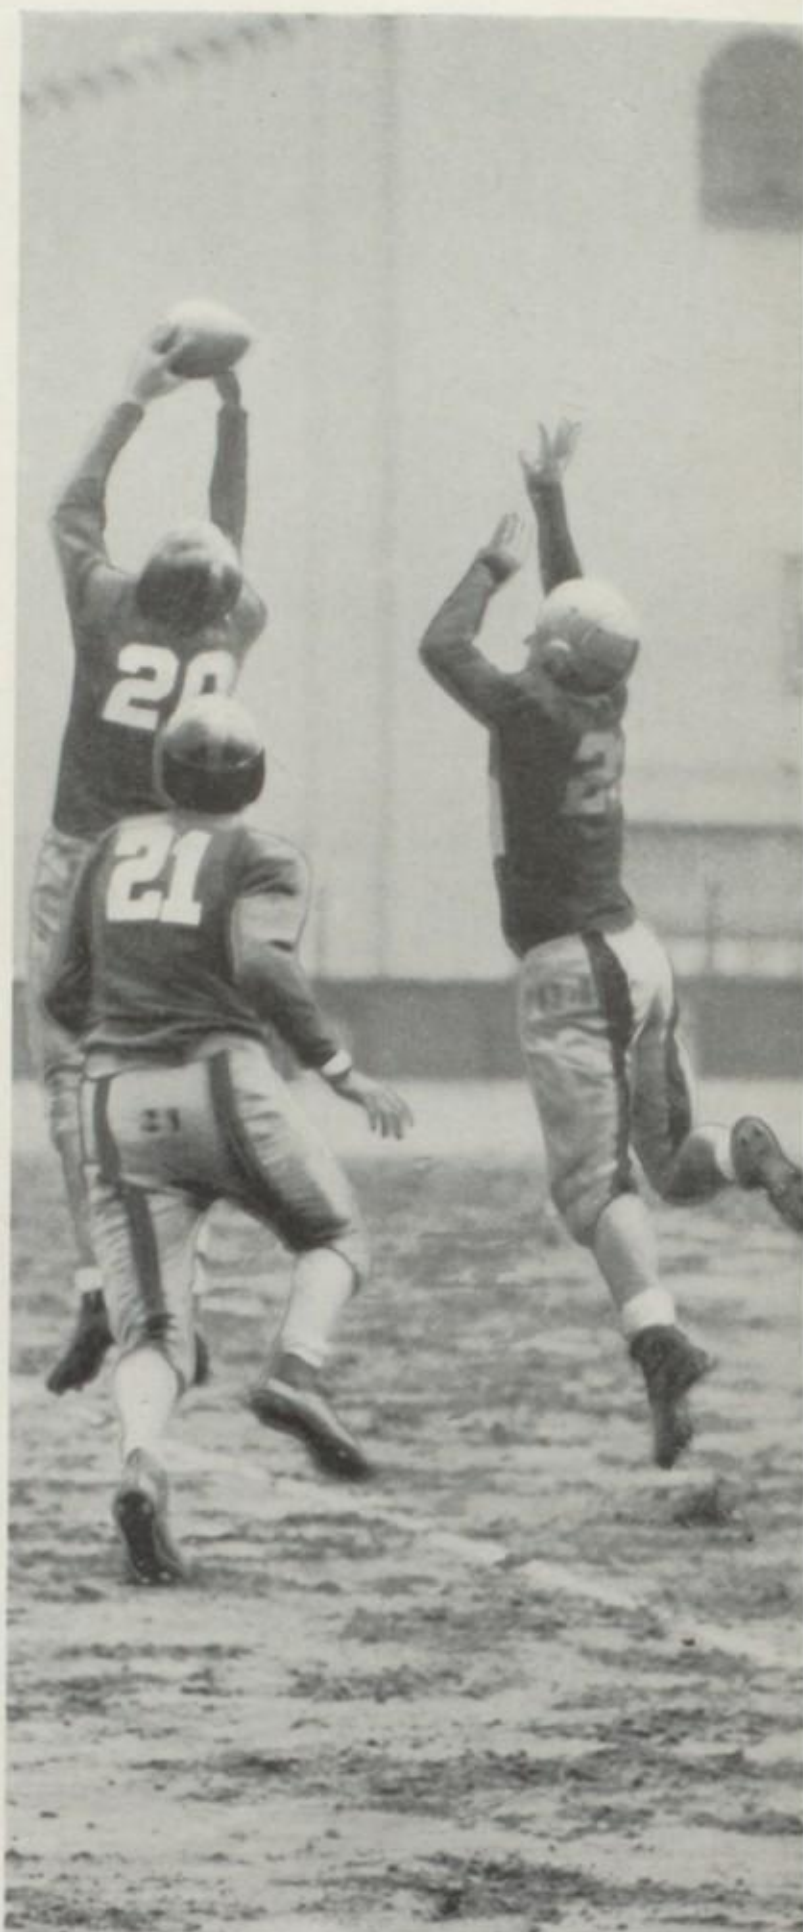

WITH A RECORD of three wins and three defeats Coach Bendele's battling Beavers wound up their best grid season in five long years. Finishing in a fourth place tie, Ballard gridmen won every other game—against West Seattle, Lincoln, and Franklin—and lost to Queen Anne, Roosevelt, and Garfield. Only one bad game marred the season, a shellacking by the Roosevelt champions, due to injuries received in a previous contest. The other five games were close and hotly contested.

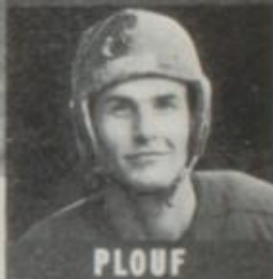

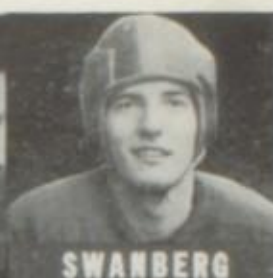

Lack of scoring punch when deep in Queen Anne territory lost the first game 13-0. Against West Seattle a last minute try-for-point by Plouf, following Mitchell's score, was the margin of victory. Biggest season upset was defeating championship-rated Lincoln, with the Beavers outplaying the Lynx throughout the game. On a muddy field the Shingleweavers met the defeat that ruined their charity game hopes, at the hands of Garfield. Ballard outplayed the Pups in the first half; but a 37 yard run resulted in the only score. Against Franklin Boyle packed the oval 37 yards through the line for a touchdown.

Twelve seniors and five juniors received letters. . . . Managers were Bob Haggerty, Francis Lingenfelter, Don Ljunghammer, Taylor Ralls, and Don Skoog. . . . In the annual charity game Roosevelt downed Garfield 16-8 for the championship.

Basketball

IN A SEASON packed with thrills, suspense and victories, and a championship within their grasp, the Ballard hoopsters hung up a record of ten wins and three losses for second place in the final standings, the best year since championship nineteen thirty-seven. All three losses were to the victorious Queen Anne five, who went through the season an undefeated "wonder team."

In the championship playoff between Queen Anne and Ballard, Ballard led until the last four minutes, when substitutions broke up the play. A grand total of 495 points were scored to their opponents' 351, a record of nearly forty points a game.

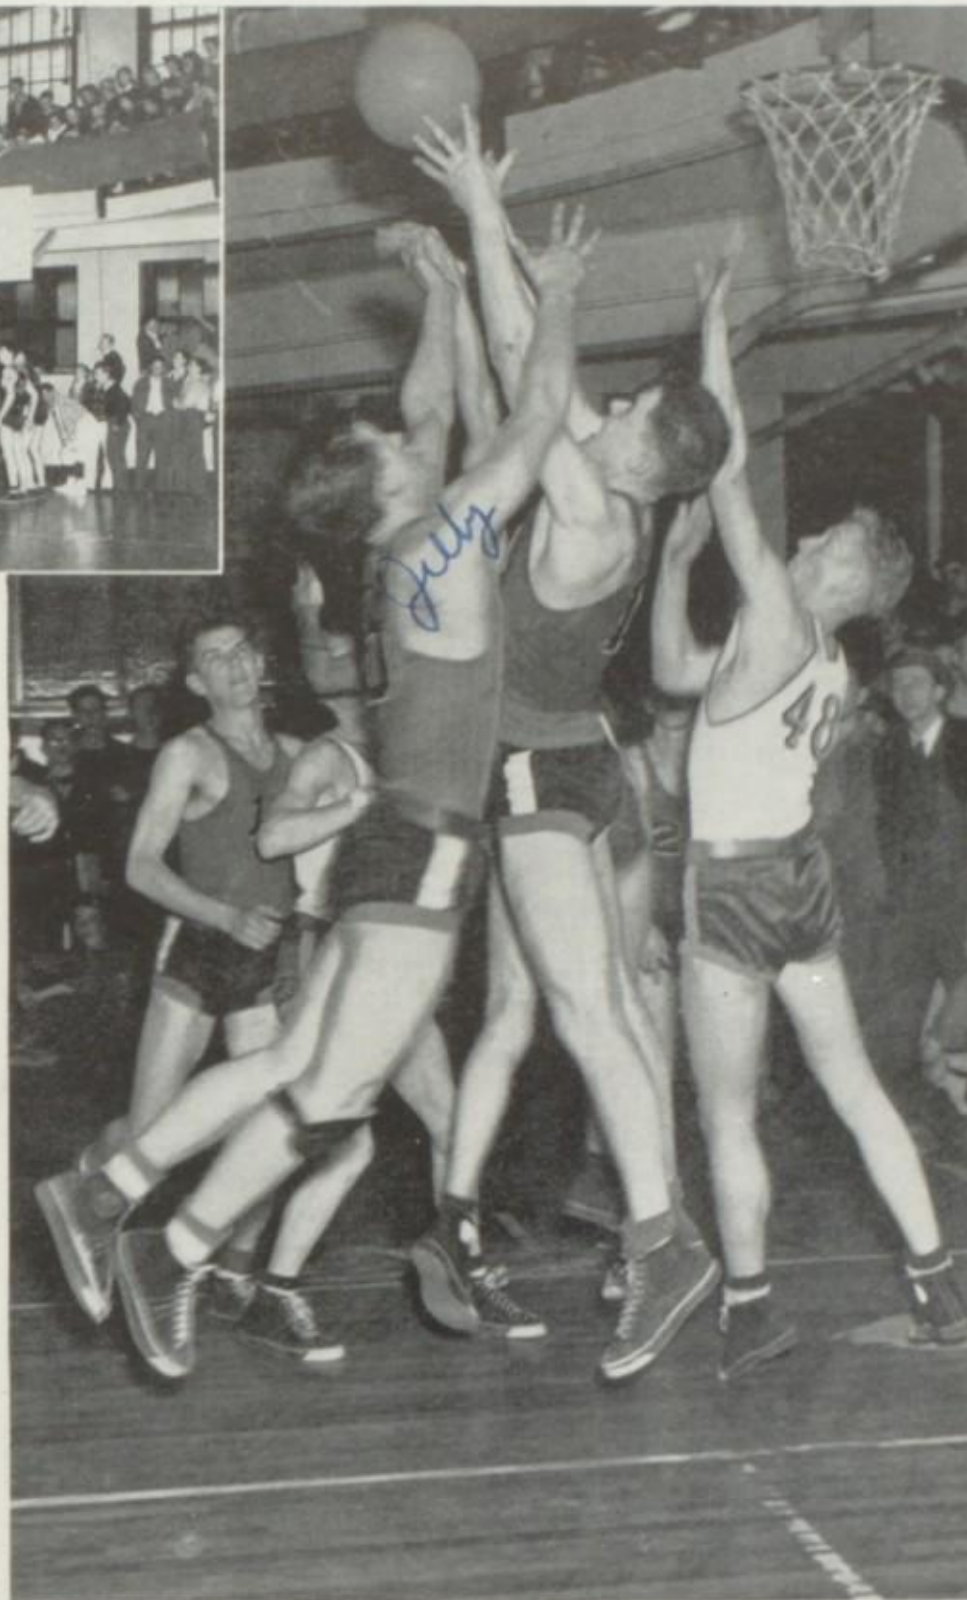

Only four lettermen, Anderson, Hawley, Searing, Svendsen, were on the squad; four are left for next year, Anderson, Boitano, Koenigs, and Wheat. A strong second team, however, makes next year's prospects bright, for the boys are getting used to Coach Bendele's system.

Second and Third Teams

DRIVING HARD throughout its schedule, the second football team won two games, tied one, and lost three. With a heavy line and a charging backfield, the Beaver third team took three games while losing two and tying one. This squad proved one of the best third teams developed at Ballard in recent years.

Intramurals

UNDER THE DIRECTION of instructor Al. C. Nardin, another year of colorful intramural sports has swiftly flown by. With emphasis on fun, general participation, and practice for coming prep competition in various sports the program moves onward with an increased variety of sports adopted. Games now a part of the intramural program are: basketball, touch-football, track, tennis, softball, baseball, ping-pong, tumbling, horseshoes, foul-shooting, volley-ball, and badminton.

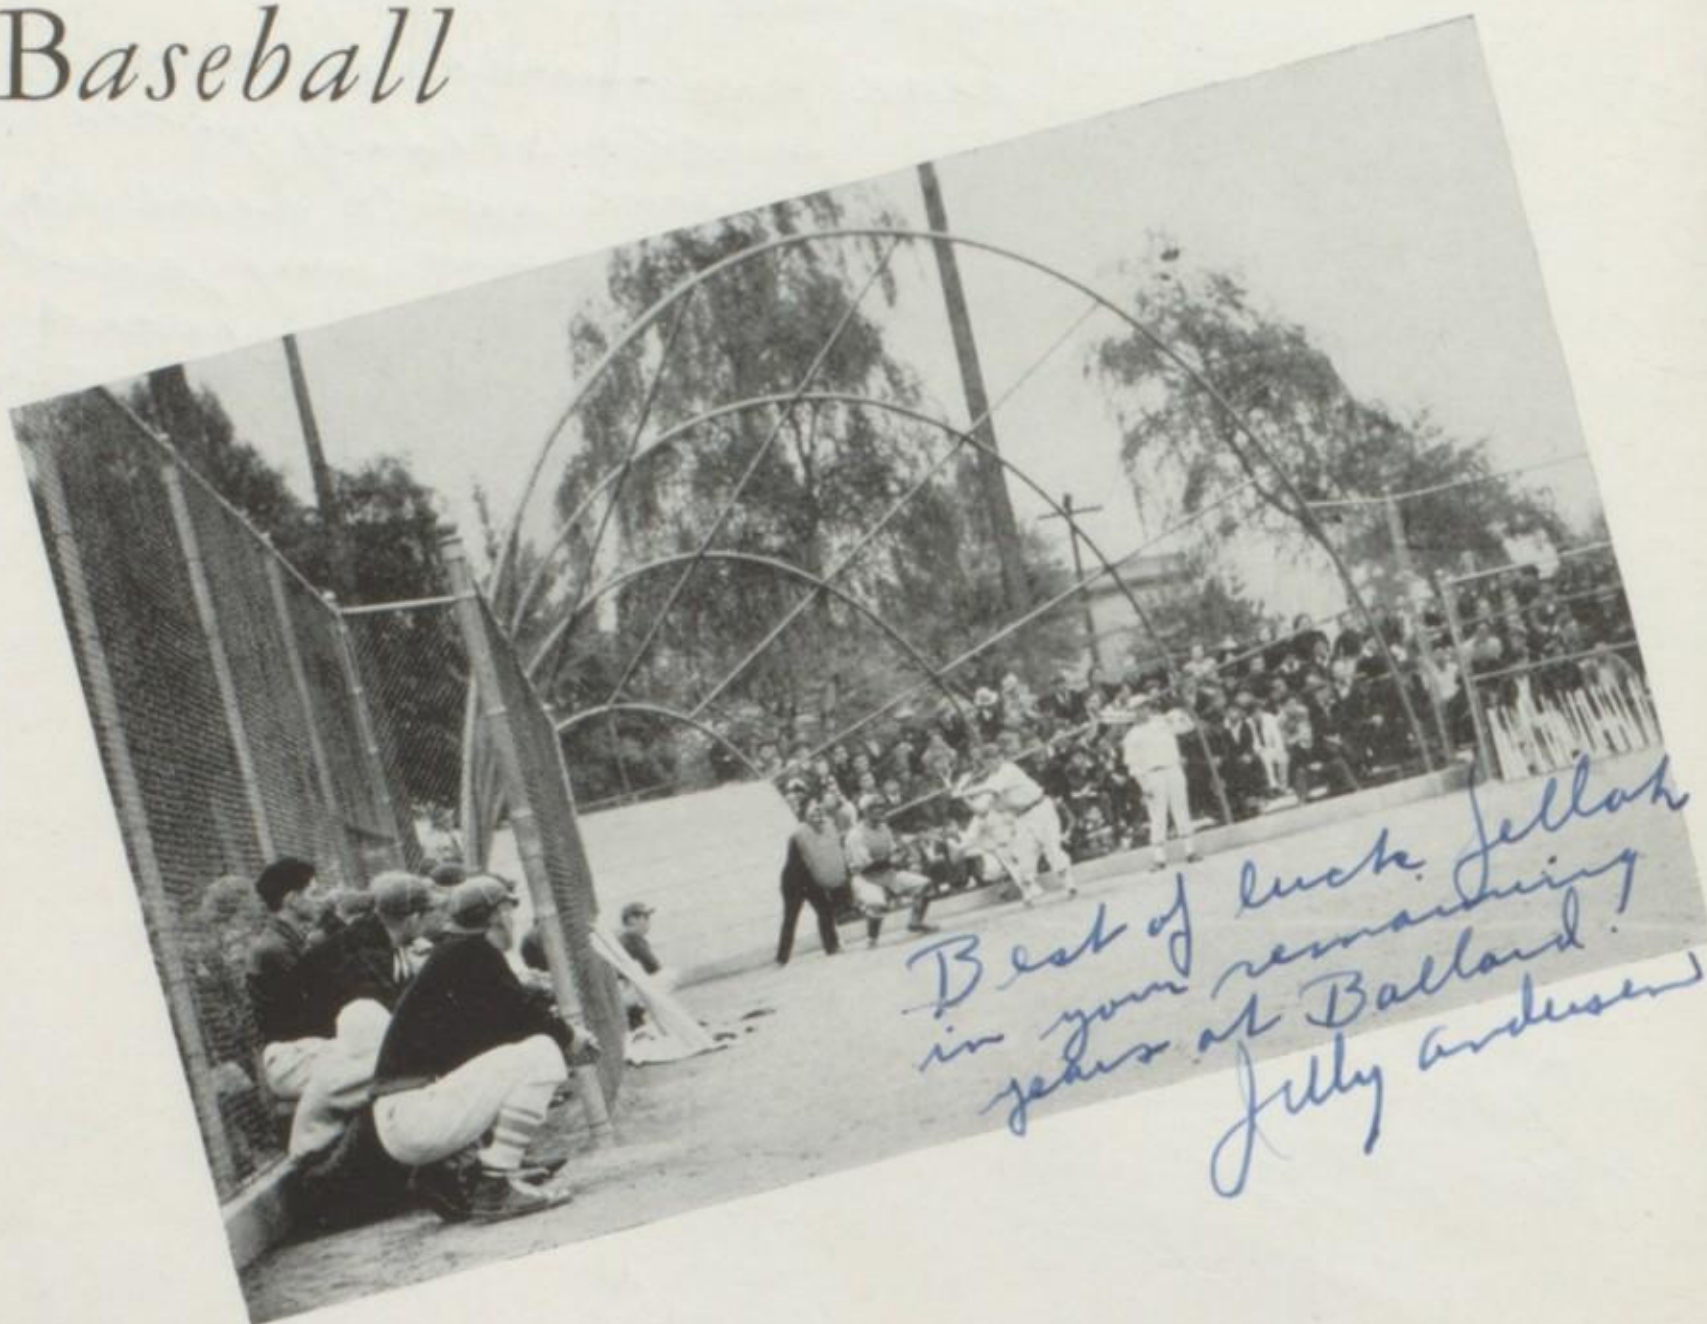

Receiving more attention than any other intramural sport, basketball involves a great number of boys as a result of its two seasons of play each school year. The fall round of play found Eugene Howisey's squad of hoopsters champions, undefeated.

Ranking a close second in intramural importance is touch-football. Showing fine form throughout the course of their schedule, the Vols took only one drubbing and captured the football title.

Track and tennis show importance during the fall and winter. Although records of competition are not kept, these sports are intramural activities. Having great popularity during the spring, softball packs many thrills and spills for the ball minded fellows. New attempts bringing badminton and volley-ball into the spring sports program have been successful with assistance by Mr. Bendele.

Baseball

BOASTING A complete letterman lineup, the Beaver baseball team easily walked through its practice games undefeated and continued winning until five games had been won when this was written. The pitching staff consisting of Bill Plouf, Jack Hawley, and Bob Marshall looked the best in the prep league. Hitting strength proved plentiful, the team scoring 9, 11, 7, 6, and 14 runs in respective tilts.

In a shower of rain that threatened to stop the game, the Beavers pounded out an opening 9-6 victory over the Broadway Tigers. Hawley pitched well despite the wet ball. After this game the Northwest clouds burst wide open to give prep diamonds a week and a half of thorough flooding. Games with Roosevelt and Garfield were cancelled as a result.

West Seattle's Indians next proved inferior to the fighting Red and Black. Tattooing the Indian outfield with extra-base hits, the Beavers enabled Hawley and Franklin supplied Ballard's test of the first round, giving the Beavers a scare, but the locals came from behind in the eighth to win, 6-5. "Howie" Hanson's home run over the right fielder's head, driving two runs in ahead of him in the third inning, drove the fans wild. In a terrific slugfest, the Shingleweavers knocked two pitchers from the box to down Broadway for the second time. Two home runs by "Jelly" featured the 14-7 win.

Track

LED BY Don Spencer, senior track star, the Ballard track athletes jumped to a good start at the beginning of their schedule and seemed headed for a position high in the prep standings. The squad, although not rated tops by the scribes, looked strong without the presence of several '39 winners. In the 220 yard run, the 440, and the broad jump, Don Spencer is expected to pull out points for the Beaver cause. Boitano is going places in the weights and football throw and is expected to represent Ballard well. Vellat and Adams are showing fine form in the 880, while Blackwell is timing good in the mile.

McEachern and Jacobsen are highly touted in the hurdle events. Watts and Farmer are expected to gain points in the 100 yard dash.

Due to a rainy spring, the Civic Stadium track was not in condition when the first scheduled meet with Franklin rolled around; the track meet was postponed indefinitely. The postponed track meet seemed to add determination to the Beavers, however, and they ran over a highly touted Broadway team, 60-51. Spencer placed first in the 220, the 440, and the broad jump. Showings of Jacobsen in the hurdles were encouraging to Ballard hopes.

Ballard slipped a notch in the relay carnival this year, but only by one half of one point. The high schools finished in this order: Lincoln 25, Garfield 15, Queen Anne 13, Upper left: John Morris flies high to clear the bar. Morris and Scott, Ballard athletes, tied for first place in the Broadway meet. Center: Robertson, McEachern, and Jacobsen run the high hurdles for Ballard. Jacobsen took first place and McEachern second in the Broadway track meet. Right: Spencer comes in first ahead of King of Broadway in the 440 yard run.

Broadway 12, Ballard $11\frac{1}{2}$, West Seattle 7, Roosevelt $3\frac{1}{2}$, Franklin 1, and Cleveland 0. By taking a second place, a third place, and two fourths, Johnny Boitano took third place in the pentathlon. Tuson of Queen Anne won the pentathlon with 39 points. Beaver relay teams drove hard to take the 880 yard and mile relays and give Ballard two firsts.

During the past two years under Coach Bendele's system of coaching, the training of underclassmen has been increased, enabling many freshmen and sophomores to learn the fundamentals of track. An inspiration to the Ballard track team is the new track constructed this year as a part of an athletic field improvement job. The repairing provides a larger track with better curves.

Tennis and Golf

SURPRIZING the fans by winning their first match, 5-4, from West Seattle, the Ballard tennis squad seemed bound for an improved season. With No. 1 man Warren Kalbach and No. 2 man Bill Revercomb leading the team, the locals looked improved over the 1939 campaign in losing to Garfield, 7-2, and Roosevelt, 8-1. Both teams are rated high.

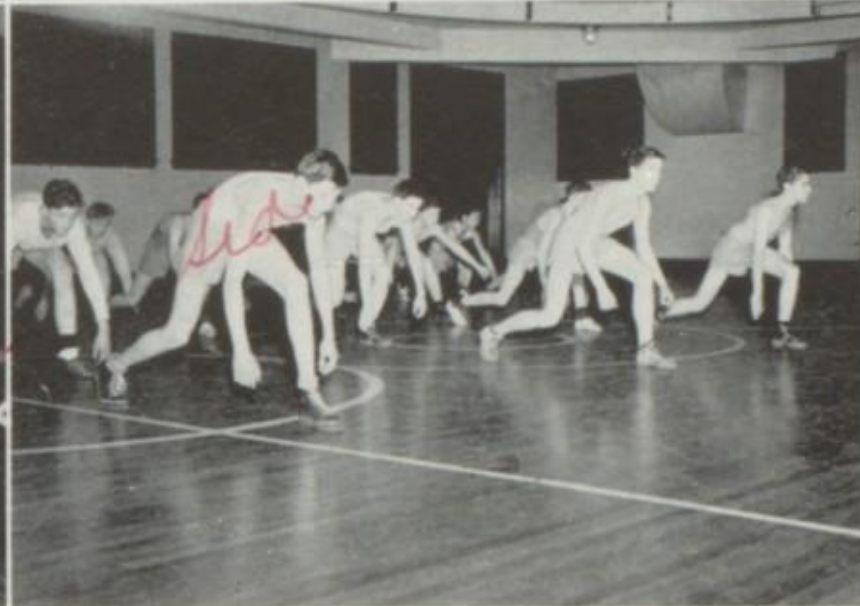

For the second consecutive year the Ballard golf team neared the crown only to be topped by Roosevelt, 18½-5½. West Seattle met a hot Ballard squad in the first game of the season and was toppled, 22½-1½. The golfers won their next two games from Lincoln and Cleveland, 13-11 and 12½-11½, but met their first defeat at the hands of Franklin, 12½-11½.

Tennis team members are, back row: Bob Childe, Verlin Lane, Burt Walker, Jim Evans; front row: Bill Revercomb, Warren Kalbach. Dick Nelson and Earl Dudman also played in matches . . . Bob Johnson was tennis manager . . . The number one doubles team was composed of Warren and Bill; number two, Jim and Burt . . . A new record was set: for the first time in years more singles than doubles matches were won.

FEATURING health service, health supervision, health instruction, and physical education, a new gymnasium system, under gym director Henry A. Bendele, is progressing rapidly and proving valuable to every participant.

The health service branch of the program serves to discover and correct at the earliest possible moment those defects which interfere with health. Included in this branch are the posture class for correction of defects, protective measures against disease such as vaccination, first aid services, and health examination of teachers in service. Provided under health supervision are hygiene of instruction,

With the adoption of the new gym system several new courses have been developed. Wrestling has proven very instructive to the husky boys. Also proving popular and second to none are the baseball and football gyms. These classes give non-lettermen opportunities to learn fundamentals. The newest and most original class is the sports class. In this class, such games as badminton, and volleyball are highlights.

I ALWAYS knew these letter girls were "Beta Particles," but here is the proof of the pudding. Goal of the Big "B" is the development of good-sportsmanship in every one of its members. To do this the Big "B" Club offers grand opportunities for leadership among the girls. In spite of the ever increasing membership, each Big "B" girl soon knows all her fellow members very well, for "Friendship" is the key word of the athletic association.

The many and varied activities of the Big "B" during the past year have been far-reaching. Managers for the after school sport turnouts are always chosen from the club. At one of the meetings an idea was suggested for special emblems for the officers. The idea was developed and now each officer has the name of her office stitched on her Big "B" emblem. An added attraction at the basketball games of late has been the sale of carmel apples by the Big "B" Club members. These were a delight to the basketball fans and a means of profit to the club, thus enabling it to buy more archery equipment.

The outstanding social functions of the first semester were the Christmas Party and the Alumni Tea. With the smell of fir and cedar and the sound of jingle bells, the Big "B" held its annual Christmas Party, complete with favors and even Santa

Claus. The girls exchanged inexpensive gifts, games were played, and everyone had a grand time. The Alumni Tea was also a memorable event. Refreshments were served while the visiting alumni chatted with the present members. A very appropriate and enjoyable program climaxed the afternoon.

The second semester brought the annual All-City Letter Breakfast, held this year at Broadway. Home activities included a Sports Afternoon culminating in a Mother-Daughter Tea at which letters were awarded, and a letter award assembly in the spring.

Radiant Energy

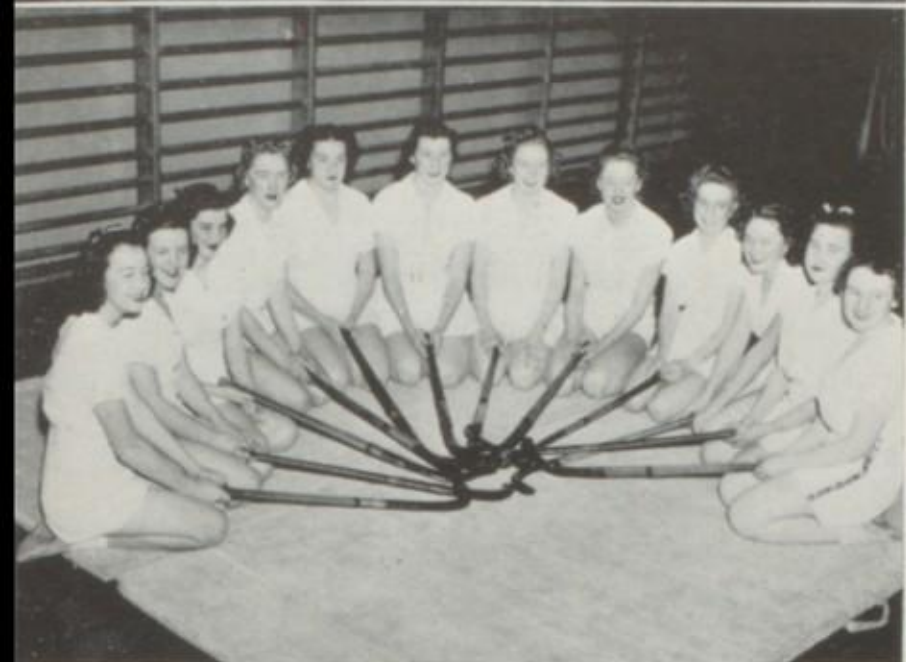

ANYONE who has witnessed girls' sports, realizes the appropriateness of this title, for the girls are radiantly healthy and energetic when participating in intramural sports, long the cause of much comment and competition among the girls in Ballard High School. There are two types of competitive sports: major sports and minor sports.

Girls who enjoy the more active games usually find pleasure in the major sports, first of which is hockey. The hockey season is ended by the holding of a hockey rally, after which the name of the winning team is placed upon the sports cup. Much credit is due to the manager, Barbara Vradenberg, whose indispensable help made the season so successful.

Following the hockey season, volleyball comes into the limelight. At the volleyball rally, after the cup is awarded to the winning team, this team plays the winning team of the loser's tournament in an exhibition game. This season's manager was Doris

Andersen, who spent much time and effort to make this sport an enjoyable one for all who participated.

A sport that is little known but well-liked is track. Unlike other competitive sports, points are obtained by the individual's ability and skill in each of the varied feats of track. Managers Juanita Hull and Eleanor Harrison stimulated a great deal of interest in this season's track turnouts by their own interest and hard work.

Last but not least is the All-American sport, baseball. Early turnouts have shown that baseball is as popular as ever, and that Irene Stroncek and Elsie Salmi are excellent managers.

Girls who have made this year's other tournaments so outstanding are: fall—badminton, Elsie Stanness; table tennis, Lola See; tennis, Marjorie Schuck; spring—badminton, Ruth Kasen; table tennis, Jean Hassell; tennis, Eva Vernon.

Hiking in the rain appeared to be a popular sport, at least most of the hikes led by managers Marilyn Lonon and Mary Ann Parish proved to be either too hot or too wet.

Regardless of the sport, the girls always have a good rousing time at every turnout, which are usually marked by the outstanding good-sportsmanship shown by every athletically-inclined girl.

Above: Standing in line gets to be a habit for absentees. Checking roll, receiving excuses, and issuing equipment keep the poor clerks busy, but somehow one just doesn't mind the work involved. Maybe it's the strenuous atmosphere. Below: One of the largest tasks of the year is the annual physical examination given to every girl new at Ballard, at the end of which suggestions for improvement are made. Center: Ending of every intramural sports season is a general rally of fun and frolic for the entertainment of all those girls interested. Singing, playing, acting, and general clowning are the rule of the day and generally the audience is given "eats." Perhaps such bribery explains the perennial popularity of a rally.

Problems In Energy

NATURALLY, every girl has neither the strength nor the desire to participate in the more strenuous sports. Building up stamina and creating interest in good healthy games is a problem for the girls' gymnasium instructors.

One sure way to stimulate any girl's interest is to show her how to improve her looks. Posture classes this year had an increased popularity as Ballard girls began to appreciate the necessity of good posture for health and beauty.

Rest gym is a new innovation here to stay. Girls are enrolled for two or three days a week, and spend an hour a day "jist restin." The end of the period finds them refreshed and ready to continue with the activity of daily school life.

Training for participation in intramural sports is one of the main points of regular gym classes, which include intermediate athletics, advanced athletics, badminton, tennis, and individual sports. The latter includes everything from table tennis to Chinese checkers.

One of the most popular seven forty-five classes is the folk dancing class, while tap dancing and modern dancing, taught during the day, have great popularity, also.

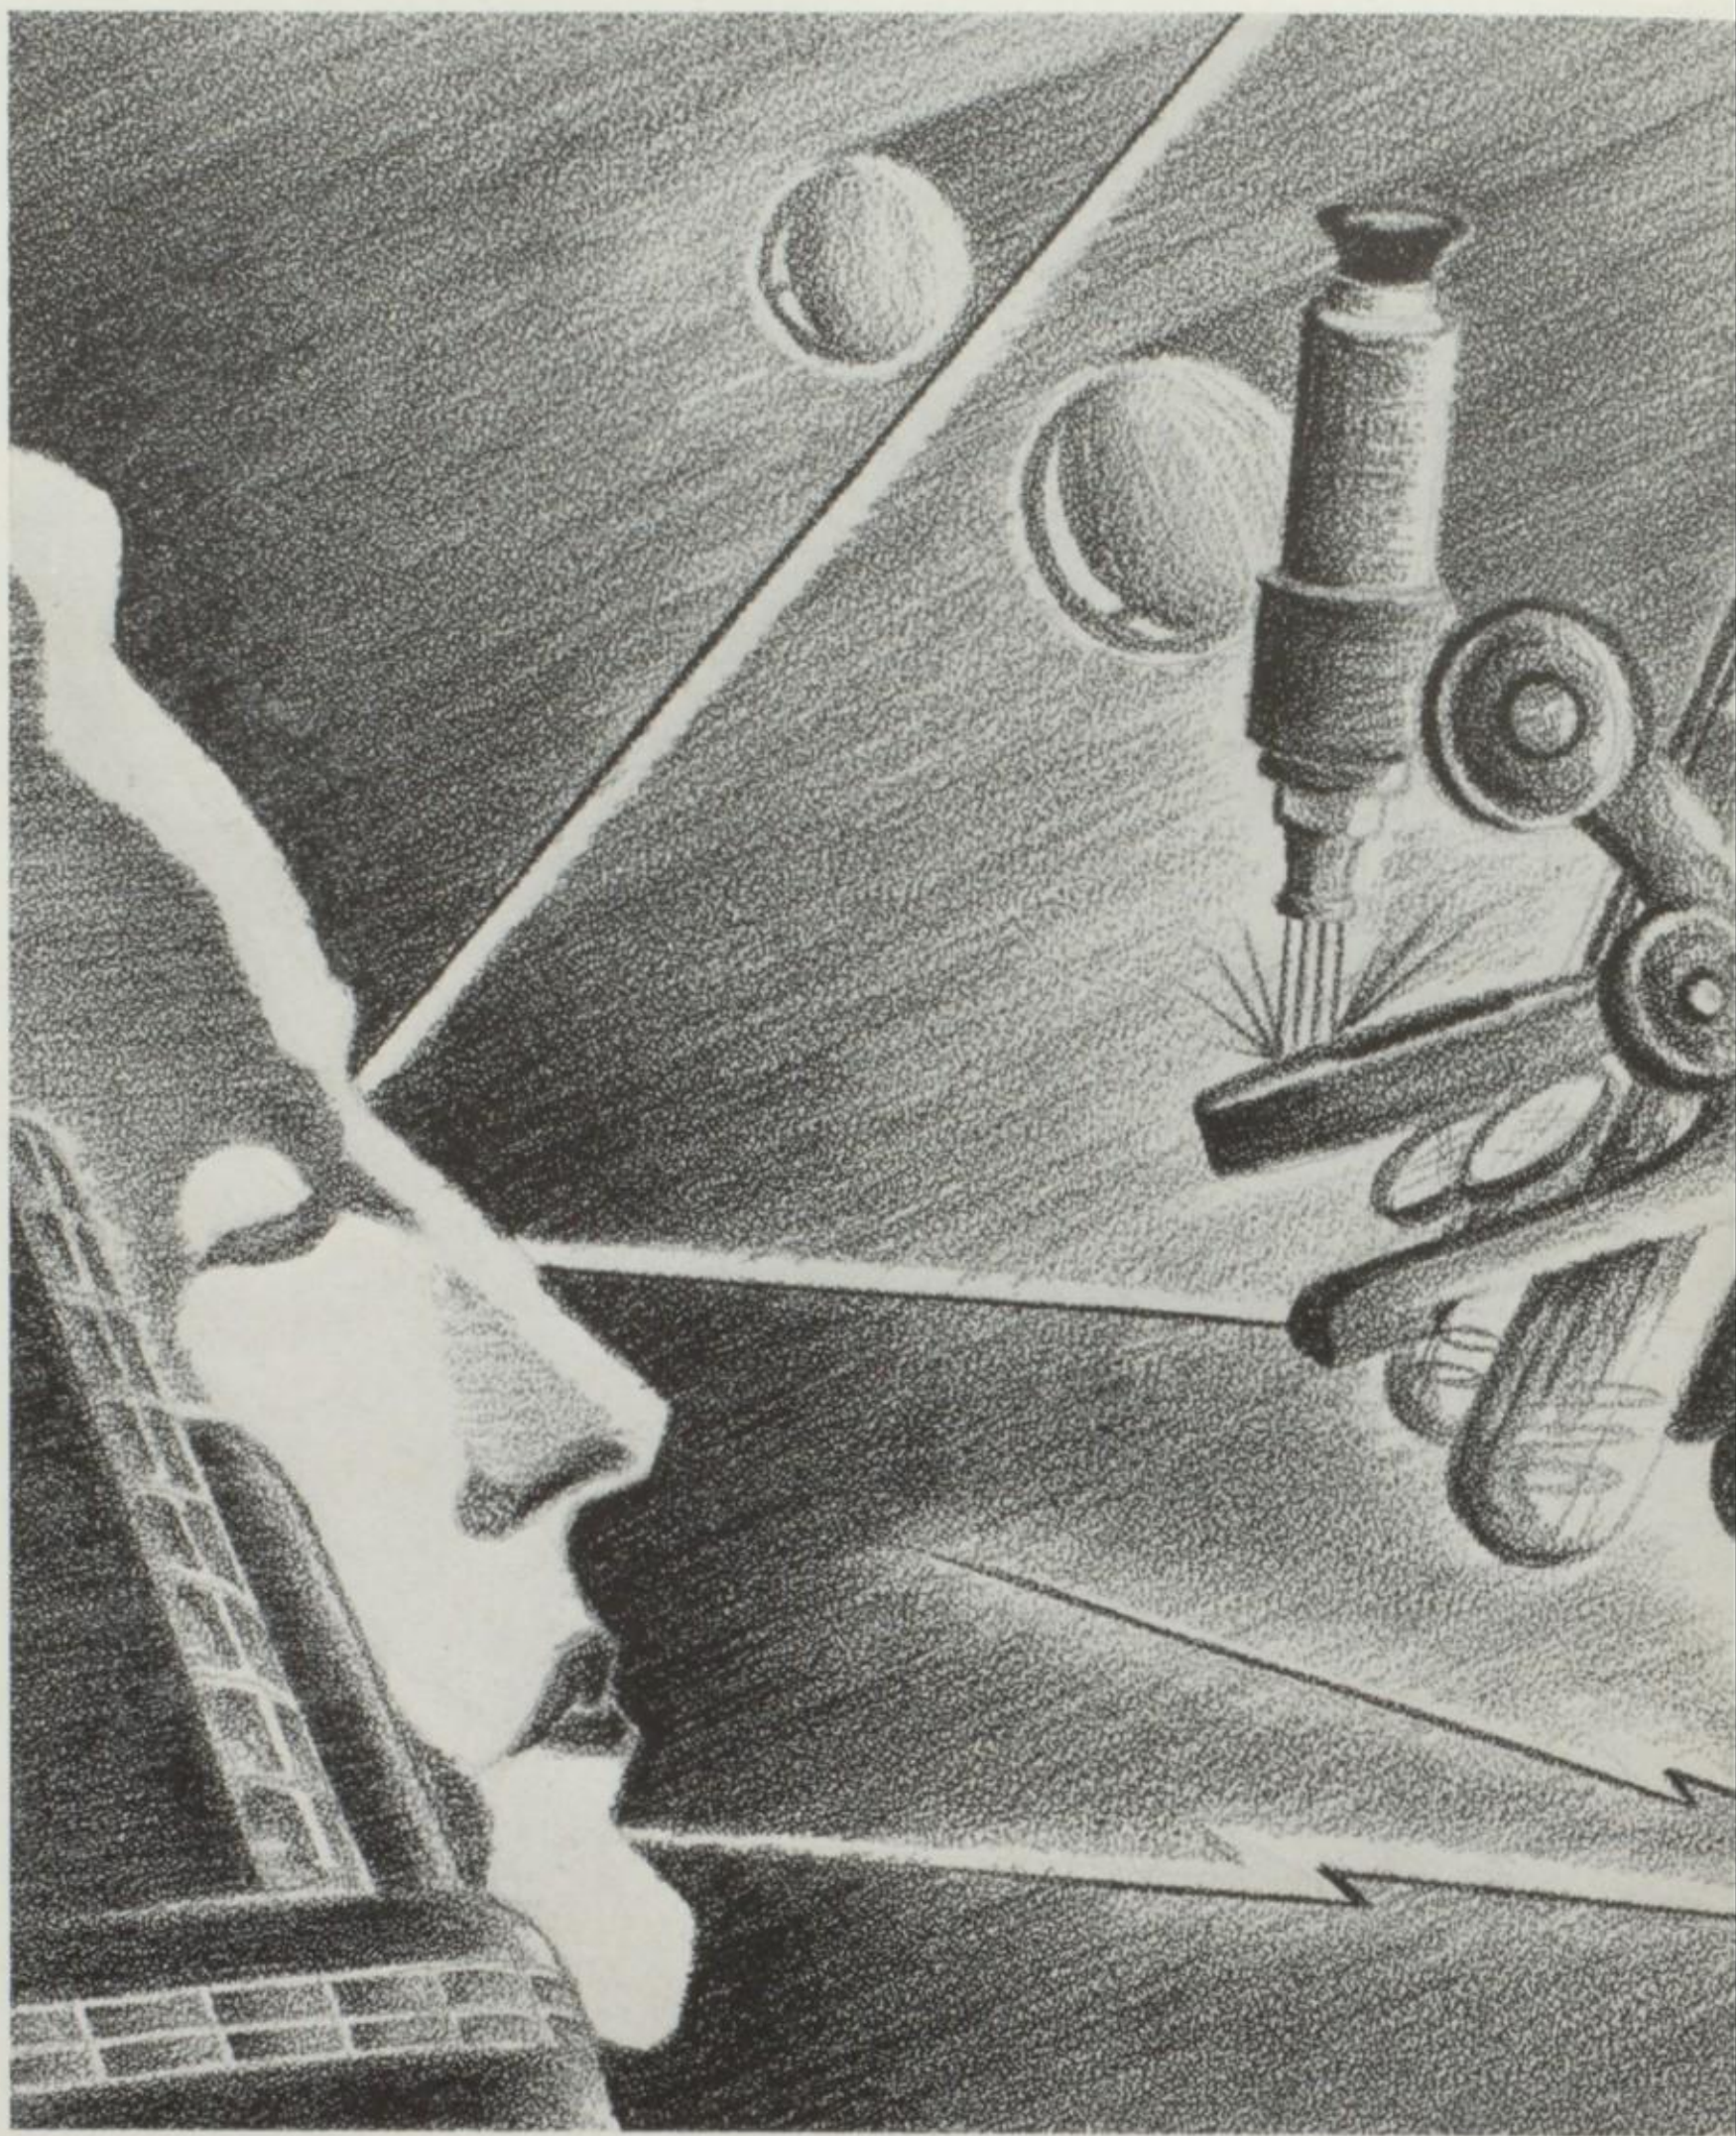

Pride and joy of the entire gymnasium is the tumbling team, whose skilled antics delight the eye of every observer. These girls are members of a regular class in which they learn new tricks and perfect those that will soon become "old stuff."

Ah, yes, let me see. Leap Year—girl chases boy—man hunt—cupid—beaux and arrows—archery. This may not be the exact train of thought the girls' archery classes followed but the fact remains that they are becoming very skilled with ye olde bow and arrow.

CHAPTER FOUR

Nuclear Studies

Here we have the chapter in which you, our readers, (we hope), will have to have the knack of hunting down to a Science. Naturally, you all want to see if our roving photographers have caught you "in the act," or snapped a candid shot at the wrong moment, but it is going to take a keen eye and undaunted determination to find your face among the multitude of pictures grouped in this section. Not even the long-respected faculty members have been left in peace, because this is the chapter on the Science of Fun—the school life section.

MATTER: "Any substance that takes up space."—Being matter themselves, Ballardites find this subject rather interesting. 1. Something must be the matter here. Been a bad boy, Keith? 2. Paul is taking up space for the time being. 3. Important matter is the visit of Norway's Crown Prince and Princess. 4. Mental space to let? 5. Nothing matters to tired Christine, Eleanor, and Juanita. 6. Sunshine is a matter of nuisance. 7. Taking pictures occupies Mr. Ken-nell. 8. Colored specs brighten matter for Carl Fortney. 9. Matters of consequence in Miss A. Woods' room. 10. Money matters at the Lost and Found. 11. Joyce Cox worries about some matter. 12. The matter here is that Doris is behind the book. 13, 14, and 15. May brings spring fever to Ballard. 16. Embarrassing matter—standing on the stage. 17. Matter of pride, H. S. pins. 18. Matter of interest—the last streetcar. 19. Study in matter.

ENERGY: "The capacity for doing work."—These pictures illustrate the burning of energy by participation in sports, by creation, and by service to others. 1. Girls' hockey teams "bully off." 2. Service groups weigh Ballard's record-breaking tinfoil contribution of five hundred pounds. 3. Christmas presents for unfortunate children. 4. Math students prepare decorations for the holiday season. 5. Batter up! 6. Building the Lake Washington bridge to scale is a man-sized job, and Ballardites enjoy inspecting the completed model.

INERTIA: "Indisposition of matter to move or stop moving."—Dancing teams and musical groups are excellent examples of inertia. 1. The Band at the Armistice Day Parade. 2. Myrtle Soderquist, Marian Loyacon, and Gloria Savage in a refreshing pause. 3. Taylor Bowie's peppy dance band. 4. Myrtle Soderquist and Pat Noonan—ballet stars. 5. Outstanding dance team—Noel Voss and Marjorie Swanson. 6. Those talented twin sisters—Pat and Jo Zainey—in another of their popular dance routines—a clever tap duet this time.

WORK: "A force that moves a resisting body does work."—Yes, believe it or not, students do work, though too often the resisting body is themselves, and the faculty has to do a little moving. As a famous (?) scientist once said: "The best thing about work is that it feels so good when you stop." 1. Viola Dufield watches Jack Woodman at work. 2. Don Skoog and Robert Magnusson find that chemistry requires work with a capital "W." 3. Kathleen Brown assumes a typically scientific pose for our roving cameraman. 4. Result of much hard work by many groups was the wonderful Christmas assembly, rapidly becoming a Ballard tradition. 5. Scott Freeman certainly knows how to work. 6. Caring for green-house plants is an enjoyable task for any botany student. 7. Radio fans Al Nelson and Elwood Smith try out the new receiving set and combine business with pleasure.

IMAGE: "A picture or optical counterpart of an object."—Favorite target of a candid camera enthusiast is the faculty. 1. Now, Miss Benham, is it as bad as all that? 2. Coach Bendele checks every Ballard play. 3. Miss Lytle's smile brightens up the entire library.

4. Miss Coulter displays her Chinese booty. 5. Straightening out student problems occupies Mr. DeVilbiss. 6. Popular Mr. Rowlee studies too. 7. Gym clerks play "teacher" every period as they check rolls and issue shower room equipment.

*Lot of news
Bill Blucher*

ADHESION: "The force of attraction between unlike molecules."—Each semester brings new adhesion examples as boy meets girl and the fun begins. In school and out certain couples always "stick." 1. Don Spencer and Kay Toft are often together. 2. Howard Hanson and Eleanor Davies enjoy being with each other. 3. Frances Gardiner finds studying "O. K." with the right company. 4. Bill Busse and Lil Manning are inseparable. 5. Bjorg gets free maid service from Les. 6. Jim Boyle and June Velas enjoy each other, too.

DIETETICS: "Hygienic science relating to diet."—Ah! Sure to bring a radiant smile to any average high schooler's face, be he man or maid, is the magic word, "Eats." In fact food is a subject dear to the heart of every teen-ager. 1. Les Cattron contemplates his delicious sandwich as if trying to decide where to bite next. 2. Seems as if Bernard Frederickson should give poor Neil Hampton a nibble. 3. Drinking milk occupies this charming Beaverette. 4.

Ballardites think of other people's dinners too—witness this large Thanksgiving basket, one of the many that Ballard students filled for needy families. 5. After a large lunch, one simply must relax; it doesn't matter where. 6. Pop and ice cream delight those attending the Freshman party. Fortunately, no one was trampled in the rush for supplies. 7. Floyd Halverson is the person behind the straw this time. Getting one's vitamins isn't an exactly disagreeable task.

LUMINOUS: "Emitting light."—"Personality plus" marks nearly every Ballard boy and girl, and I'm not exaggerating. 1. Four lasses enjoy a secret joke. 2. Happy about the whole thing are Vernon Frost and Les Cattron, but George Velas—oh! 3. Dale Emerson, owner of a tantalizing gaze. 4. Gene Howisey, popular senior class president. 5. Doris Loken must have "it" to bring back two grads. 6. Dorothy, June, Helen, and Eva—WOW! 7. Dear, dear, Walt Hanson's got a deer. 8. Helen Wilhelm and Kitty Stranach make a charming twosome. 9. Doris Djernis must be trying to crack the camera. 10. Lil Manning is displeased about something. 11 and 12. Paul Skartvedt and Ruth Howisey are skiing fans too. 13. Outstanding and beloved personalities are "Daddy" Coulter and Mrs. Watson. 14. "Chuck" Pankey comforts invalid Virginia Eggan. 15. At the Footlighters' Easter party.

RESONANCE: "The reenforcing of one sound wave by another."—In this case, resonance and the "gift of gab" appear to be identical as Ballard faculty members chat about this and that. Probable topic of conversation: 1. Mr. Pease and Mr. Rowlee—Sports. 2. Mr.

Hazzard and Mr. Kennell—Pictures. 3. Miss Dodge and Mr. DeVilbiss—School. 4. Mr. Voiland and ?—Employment. 5. "Teacher"—Physics. 6. Mrs. Arnold and Miss K. Russell—Clothes. 7. Mr. Walker and a student—Debate or classwork.

INTERFERENCE: "The extinction or reduction of one sound wave by another."—When one thinks of noise it's amazing how quickly popular orchestras and peppy students come to mind. 1. A "hot" drummer interferes with anyone's noise. 2. Maybe interference explains the gay confusion when this enthusiastic gang gets together. 3. Biggest "oompa pa" of them all comes out of a large brass horn. 4. "Dody" Moon entertains. 5. An enthusiastic saxaphonist at his best. 6. Wood wind trio "puckers up."

ABSORPTION: "The act of taking in."—Ballardites are always either taking in or being "took." 1. Mr. Pease absorbs the latest sports news. 2. Doris Hawthorne and Shirley Hansen perform a chemistry experiment. 3. "Pink" Rohrbach absorbs a little "book-learning." 4. Richard explains a problem to Gordon. 5. Dale and Bill enjoy themselves. 6. Three Beaverettes absorb a little Vitamin D. 7. Jean Hassell reads the Talisman! 8. Trying to learn is Doug Shaw. 9. Ernie Lund's averted interest presents a direct contrast to Hal Misner's rapt attention. 10. A comp forum keeps "Winnie" Sleipnes and Gerry Stevens in a solemn mood. Surely the world isn't that hopeless! 11. "Daisy" Marshall concentrates on Harry Numrich's latest joke. 12. Wonder whom Carl's thinking of—blond or brunette? 13. Study in lights and shadow, mostly shadow. 14. Ella Cowe rests in the deliciously warm sun.

HIGH VOLTAGE: "Electrical pressure is measured in volts."—Immense electrical pressure must fly through space when some of these Ballardites get together. 1. Electrical shock (sunstroke?) must have affected Floyd Jacobsen. 2. Sparks fly between Anne Zalud and Evelyn Brose. 3. Runo Lundquist and Jack Westphal relax—low voltage, I betcha. 4. Here is a well-connected conversation on the art of Science. 5. High tension wires certainly hummed during this game. 6. These "wires" didn't hum—they shrieked! 7. Mr. McComb pauses to restore some of his voltage lost in previous activity. 8. Ballardites had something to think about after Mr. Fleming's electrically charged message was presented to them. 9. Bill Wartes gives a high pressure sales talk on California oranges. I notice that he came right back to dear old Ballard, though. Due to California's liquid sunshine, I suspect.

KINETIC: "Moving."—Seems as if you Ballardites are always "on the go." 1. Closeup of Ballard maidens doing "red hot pepper." 2. From a third floor window the camera catches a miss really going somewhere. 3. Back from a fire drill move chatting study hall students. 4. Ballard's band forms a perfect "B" in the West Seattle stadium. 5. Machines are always moving, or so it seems. 6. Even the boys are jumping rope at Ballard nowadays, and very often their skill excels that of the feminine addicts.

UNSTABLE EQUILIBRIUM: "The center of gravity is above the point of support."—Rugged mountain peaks and snow covered valleys may look fairly stable, but the equilibrium of those who ski or climb is often very unstable. 1. Three skiers start out onto fresh snow. 2. Bergsteigers rest on a craggy hillside. 3. Warren Kalbach and his shadow. 4. Doris Anderson musses up the snow. 5. Silhouette against the sky. 6. Queen Louise Johnson poses among the implements of her favorite Science.

CONDENSATION: "Act of reducing a substance to another and denser form."—From the varied expression on these students' faces, I'd say that the more studying they do, the denser the subject becomes. 1. Jack Woodman concentrates with all his might. 2. Art students condense their knowledge. 3. Alf Norlund thinks seriously of some things! 4. Commercial condenser—the adding machine. Eleanor Petrie knows how to handle it, too. 5. A typical Ballard student thoughtfully observes her desk as if trying to forget her school work. 6. Margaret Striker is awed neither by books nor by impressive-looking equipment. 7. Lois finds an interesting book. 8. Hal Misner chews only good erasers while concentrating. 9. Girl with studying down to a Science—Marilyn Mason. 10. Three on one book—Warren Kalbach, Keith, Miller, and Jack Westphal. 11. Don Smith strives to condense a thesis.

DIFFUSION: "Intermingling without regard to weight." 1. Boy's Double Quartet members diffuse at the Los Angeles station. 2. Yell leaders Bob Good, Eddie Lippincott, Carl Holmgren and Winton Sleipnes are silhouetted in one of the puddles at the "Mud Bowl." 3. Fortunately, canoes do not diffuse with H_2O or else there would be four very wet people here. 4. Sprawling on the lawn is comfortable diffusion. 5. Intermingling is a favorite occupation of most Beaverettes. 6. Three typical spooks illustrate the famous diffusing ability of "haunts." 7. When school lets out no one regards anything. 8. School dances are grand examples of diffusion. 9. Assemblies are another popular cause for diffusing. 10. When the sand man comes, weight or another person's comfort means nothing. 11. Taking pictures makes everyone completely willing to diffuse—not that Ballardites consider themselves good looking.

CHAPTER FIVE

Complex Compounds

Freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors—here you are! Whether you are the traditional “greeney” hunting for the non-existent elevator, or high and mighty graduate about to receive your diploma, this is your section. As Ballardites you have been engaged in the Science of Living. So to the seniors—“Good Luck;” to the juniors—“Carry on;” to the sophomores—“It won’t be long now;” and to the freshmen—“The first year’s the hardest.” Here is a review of your last year’s activities, and pages on pages of photos of you, just you.

W. TWANBERG

Having had a taste of what this high school life is like, the freshman class officers seem to think that it's not so bad after all. Lee Harrison, president; Ethel Larsen, secretary; Miss Knuppenberg, advisor; Betty Dunlap, treasurer; Mr. Van Devanter, advisor; Bill Boyle, vice-president.

Freshmen

GONE ARE the days of the timid "greenies" who bought elevator tickets, climbed to the roof garden, looked for a key to the pitcher's box, and ran errands for the bossy upperclassmen. It takes an expert to spot a freshman in these times, for the boys are self-confident; the girls, sophisticated. Many an upperclassman envies their polish and popularity, their sureness at all times. If this is the younger generation, I'm all for it.

These friendly freshmen had a gay old time at their annual get-together held in the auditorium on January twenty-fourth.

Entertainers included two pianists, Helen Johnson playing "Scatterbrain" and "Chatterbox," most appropriate considering her audience, eh what?—and Evelyn Link, who played "Deep Purple" and "Beautiful Ohio"—"Come on Chilluns, let's dance." Saxaphoninst Alan Lamphere played "Oh Johnny," "South of the Border," two hits of the day; while Walter Barnum sang two others, "Over the Rainbow," academy award winner, and "Umbrella Man," accompanied by Bergl Colman on the piano.

Best of all to the average high schooler, who eats first and diets later, were the ice cream and soda pop served in the lunch room after the entertainment.

Looking forward to next year when they will enter into the group of upperclassmen are these sophomore class officers: Larry Peeples, president; Miss Miles, sponsor; Joyce Cox, vice-president; Mr. Payne, sponsor; Jean Curtis, secretary; absentee, Gordon Breda, secretary.

THERE's little difference between most of the sophomores and freshmen. The freshmen aren't as "green" any more, and many of the sophomores are just beginning at Ballard, so the results are about equal. There just isn't any fun left for the haughty upperclassmen 'cause these "sophs" won't "bite" either. You never find them hunting for a left-handed monkey wrench, no siree! These precocious children have the highest number of members on the Honor Society and are they proud of that black bar with a red stripe! Seems their theme song is "The Bars and Stripes Forever."

Like the freshmen, the sophomores are organized for primarily social reasons. Incidentally, they gain experience with self-government and keep in contact with school activities. In the fall the class had its annual party with fun for all, and in the spring they held a dance, just to keep in practice until they are eligible to attend the peppy Junior-Senior dances. Confidentially, the demand for male partners was so great that a number of junior and senior boys had to be invited.

Class meetings are held only when an occasion demands and are marked by their informal discussion. These meetings are typical club meetings, committees are appointed, plans decided upon, and suggestions given.

Juniors

Dear Bob,
 Good luck to a swell bid and a swell "Candy Box"
 Cecil Barley

These junior class officers Chester Oddson, president; Mary Ellen Warrington, vice-president; Bob Childe, secretary; Lorraine Peterson, reporter; Miss K. Russell, Mr. Minzel, sponsors, are wondering what it will feel like to be high-and-mighty seniors! Won't they be surprised to find that it doesn't feel any different?

NO LONGER an underclassman, but not yet the "cock of the walk" is the junior. Although juniors are sure that they are capable of handling the reins, the seniors have everything under control and the junior class must wait its turn. Waiting can be fun though, especially if you have a lively bunch like these juniors.

Outstanding event of each semester for the class is the junior-senior dance. The fall dance featured the music of the Jubedeers, popular Ballard orchestra. Surprise event, tho, was the spring tolo. Leap Year provided a good excuse for reversing the usual procedure, so every girl was required to bring a male escort with her before entering the lunchroom.

At the second dance a nickelodeon was used, just to be different.

Pleased expressions appear on the faces of these sponsors as Mr. Minzel explains the mechanism that makes "the music go round and round and come out here." Junior class sponsors Mr. Minzel and Miss K. Russell and Senior class sponsors Mr. Goodman and Miss Sifton.

Upper right: "Remember that sophomore dance?" "Say, that assembly was something!" "Did you see the game?" These are probably some of the reminiscences of the senior class officers: Eugene Howisey, president; Harry Numrich, vice-president; Ray Vellat, secretary; Taylor Bowie, reporter; Miss Sifton and Mr. Goodman, sponsors.

Lower right: Commencement speakers include these seniors—Sig Johnson and Gene Howisey, elected by the class; Margaret Krokeid, valedictorian, and Warren Kalbach, salutatorian; Mary Ann Parish and Don Spencer, chosen by the faculty.

Seniors

MINGLED THRILLS and sorrows characterize the year of a typical senior—thrilled because he is now "on the top of the world," subject to fewer rules and regulations and endowed with increased privileges, but sorry to put behind him the fun of school life, the comradeship gained in school activities.

Senior activities this year include two junior-senior dances, a Leap Year Tolo, an assembly advertising "Just Making Believe," a senior picnic, and a "Senior Prom." Planning all these activities is a cabinet of four boys, all of whom are interested in many and varied activities.

Exciting days for the senior class are the first two weeks of June, for their time is crowded with signing annuals, taking final examinations, going to the senior picnic, attending commencement, and dancing at the prom. After the excitement is all over, some four hundred seniors will find themselves with a diploma, an annual, and memories of a wonderful year.

Lots of luck
during next year's track season and otherwise.

Bob you showed 'em
some speed this year
all right, but what about next year? Competition will be keen, but I know you will come through. Let's help Ballard stay up there!
Ballard Ray '40

Bob!
Don't forget you've got to keep your head and keep your eyes open and you'll be a winner
I hope

We should be in track
next year won't we?
Bud?
